Local Buyers Reported Buying Necessities To Avoid New Tax.

REVENUE IS TO BALANCE BUDGET

Upon the stroke of midnight tonight the major machinery of the new tax bill will be thrown into gear, to operate continuously through June 30, 1934.

Many Gettysburgians are reported to be "laying in" a supply of necessities upon which a tax has been placed, to avoid paying the ditional fee starting Tuesday.

At that time the government's program for raising more than half of the additional tax burden of $1,118,500,000 will be launched through a new manufacturers' excise levy, stamp taxes and miscellaneous others. From these the treasury hopes to realize $654,000,000 during the coming fiscal year.

LACK OF PRAYER STOPS SPIRITUAL PROGRESS TODAY

Local Pastor Exhorts Congregation To Pray Without Ceasing.

PRAYER BRINGS MANY BLESSINGS

"Pray as you have never before prayed. Pray without ceasing, pray with faith believing, pray alone, pray with your family, pray in groups, pray in the mid-week service," was the plea brought to the congregation by the Rev. Frederick B. Crane, pastor of the Presbyterian church, in his sermon Sunday morning.

"Unoffered Prayer" was the title of the sermon and the text, James 4:2, "Ye have not, because ye ask not."

"We do not pray enough, and therefore we cannot have," said the Rev. Mr. Crane. "To think that the only barrier which excludes us from a wealth of spiritual blessing is our failure to request the outpouring of God's bounty. I recently attended a meeting of ministers in which the prevailing tone of the discussion was one of inquiry. Inquiry into the reason for the dearth of spiritual progress in our day. One mentioned the cycle of spiritual depression before the flood of revival, another the inroads of mechanical inventions, such as automobiles, which keep the people from going to church, and still another mentioned the growing tendency of making the Sabbath a national holiday for dissipation.

Prayer Is Needed

"But no one mentioned that which lies down deep beneath all these contributory causes to spiritual inertia, the crux of the whole situation which is unoffered prayer. Why our unproductice labors? Why our scanty harvests? 'Ye have not because ye ask not.'"

Continuing the pastor said, "All about us are the significant signs of a people who do not pray enough. We need not go outside our community or outside our own congregation, in fact, to see the needs which are crying for remedy and relief. Our pews are fairly well filled in one of our Sunday services; at night there are many vacancies. Yet there are enough professing Christians on the roll book of our church to crowd this house of God twice each Sabbath. If we seek to crowd our churches, if we long for a praying prayer meeting, if we yearn for the saving of souls, the conversion of sinners, we must pray more."

Prayer is Obligation

In concluding the speaker told the story of a mother who was brought to grief by a crime committed by her son and how she condemned herself for not having prayed more.

"Perhaps her self-condemnation was justified," said the pastor. "If so, it is an illustration and but one of the multitudes of illustrations of the curses wrought because of unoffered prayer. We are cursed because we do not pray enough. Remember that prayer is more than a privilege. It is that but it is more than that, it is an obligation also. Jesus said, 'Men ought always to pray.' Notice the ought. It expresses obligation, duty. To neglect prayer is to neglect a bound duty. Who is without sin in this regard? We do not pray enough. God's work lags. We fail in our labor because we fail to pray."

Hands Blackened by Chemical Betray Suspect In Kidnap Plot

Bloomsburg, Pa., June 20 (AP)—A few ounces of silver nitrate caught an extortion suspect who had slipped through a cordon of one hundred state troopers, it was revealed Sunday.

The prisoner, J. Clarence Thoman, a Pennsylvania railroad telegrapher, was captured in a ten-day hunt through the Susquehanna valley for "the man with the blackened hands."

The scheme that led to his capture was devised by Sergt. William Clark, of the state police. Harry L. Magee, 31, wealthy carpet manufacturer of Philadelphia, reported to Clark that he had been receiving letters in which the writer threatened to kidnap Magee's two small children if he did not drop $15,000 from an airplane at a spot (marked by a white cloth) on lonely Hunlock Mountain.

Clark concentrated one hundred police in a twenty-mile area around the mountain and told Magee, who is a licensed airplane pilot, to fly over it looking for the cloth signal. Thoman watched Magee from his office in the railroad signal tower at Retreat, across the river.

After Magee had made several trips up the river Thoman crossed over and spread the signal cloth. Magee spiraled his plane as a signal to troopers designating the spot. As the police closed in on the mountain Magee dropped a dummy package on the outside of which were two $20 bills.

Thoman pounced on the money and dodged through the line of police closing in on the mountain. But he had reckoned without Sergeant Clark's trump card. The policeman had had Magee soak the bundle and the bills in silver nitrate.

The chemical blackened Thoman's hands with a stain that he tried for ten days to wash off. The police finally traced one of the $20 bills to the Danville (Pa.) district and Thoman was arrested there late Sunday when a trooper noticed his blackened hands.

At first he denied his guilt, but the questioning troopers met his protestations of innocence by glaring fixedly at his blackened hands until he confessed, they said.

Thomas also admitted sending extortion letters to four other wealthy Pennsylvanians, according to the police, saying the he needed the money to build a home.

LACK OF PRAYER STOPS SPIRITUAL PROGRESS TODAY

Local Pastor Exhorts Congregation To Pray Without Ceasing.

PRAYER BRINGS MANY BLESSINGS

"Pray as you have never before prayed. Pray without ceasing, pray with faith believing, pray alone, pray with your family, pray in groups, pray in the mid-week service," was the plea brought to the congregation by the Rev. Frederick B. Crane, pastor of the Presbyterian church, in his sermon Sunday morning.

"Unoffered Prayer" was the title of the sermon and the text, James 4:2, "Ye have not, because ye ask not."

"We do not pray enough, and therefore we cannot have," said the Rev. Mr. Crane. "To think that the only barrier which excludes us from a wealth of spiritual blessing is our failure to request the outpouring of God's bounty. I recently attended a meeting of ministers in which the prevailing tone of the discussion was one of inquiry. Inquiry into the reason for the dearth of spiritual progress in our day. One mentioned the cycle of spiritual depression before the flood of revival, another the inroads of mechanical inventions, such as automobiles, which keep the people from going to church, and still another mentioned the growing tendency of making the Sabbath a national holiday for dissipation.

Prayer Is Needed

"But no one mentioned that which lies down deep beneath all these contributory causes to spiritual inertia, the crux of the whole situation which is unoffered prayer. Why our unproductice labors? Why our scanty harvests? 'Ye have not because ye ask not.'"

Continuing the pastor said, "All about us are the significant signs of a people who do not pray enough. We need not go outside our community or outside our own congregation, in fact, to see the needs which are crying for remedy and relief. Our pews are fairly well filled in one of our Sunday services; at night there are many vacancies. Yet there are enough professing Christians on the roll book of our church to crowd this house of God twice each Sabbath. If we seek to crowd our churches, if we long for a praying prayer meeting, if we yearn for the saving of souls, the conversion of sinners, we must pray more."

Prayer is Obligation

In concluding the speaker told the story of a mother who was brought to grief by a crime committed by her son and how she condemned herself for not having prayed more.

"Perhaps her self-condemnation was justified," said the pastor. "If so, it is an illustration and but one of the multitudes of illustrations of the curses wrought because of unoffered prayer. We are cursed because we do not pray enough. Remember that prayer is more than a privilege. It is that but it is more than that, it is an obligation also. Jesus said, 'Men ought always to pray.' Notice the ought. It expresses obligation, duty. To neglect prayer is to neglect a bound duty. Who is without sin in this regard? We do not pray enough. God's work lags. We fail in our labor because we fail to pray."

SEEKS TRIAL IN DIVORCE ISSUE

Jury Trial Of A Specific Allegation Sought By Local Respondent.

Ralph C. Deatrick, commanding officer of the local unit of the Pennsylvania national guard, was ordered by Judge Donald P. McPherson in court today to show cause why a jury trial of a specific allegation of his divorce action should not be held.

Eugene V. Bulleit, Gettysburg attorney-at-law, counsel for Mrs. Amy Carroll (Henderson) Deatrick, respondent in the divorce action, asked the court for a rule for the jury trial. The rule was made returnable on July 18.

In his original libel, Deatrick accused his wife, among other things, of improper conduct with "one J. Perry Albert," and on this allegation Mrs. Deatrick seeks trial by jury. Deatrick also alleges cruel and barbarous treatment in his divorce libel.

Hands Blackened by Chemical Betray Suspect In Kidnap Plot

Bloomsburg, Pa., June 20 (AP)—A few ounces of silver nitrate caught an extortion suspect who had slipped through a cordon of one hundred state troopers, it was revealed Sunday.

The prisoner, J. Clarence Thoman, a Pennsylvania railroad telegrapher, was captured in a ten-day hunt through the Susquehanna valley for "the man with the blackened hands."

The scheme that led to his capture was devised by Sergt. William Clark, of the state police. Harry L. Magee, 31, wealthy carpet manufacturer of Philadelphia, reported to Clark that he had been receiving letters in which the writer threatened to kidnap Magee's two small children if he did not drop $15,000 from an airplane at a spot (marked by a white cloth) on lonely Hunlock Mountain.

Clark concentrated one hundred police in a twenty-mile area around the mountain and told Magee, who is a licensed airplane pilot, to fly over it looking for the cloth signal. Thoman watched Magee from his office in the railroad signal tower at Retreat, across the river.

After Magee had made several trips up the river Thoman crossed over and spread the signal cloth. Magee spiraled his plane as a signal to troopers designating the spot. As the police closed in on the mountain Magee dropped a dummy package on the outside of which were two $20 bills.

Thoman pounced on the money and dodged through the line of police closing in on the mountain. But he had reckoned without Sergeant Clark's trump card. The policeman had had Magee soak the bundle and the bills in silver nitrate.

The chemical blackened Thoman's hands with a stain that he tried for ten days to wash off. The police finally traced one of the $20 bills to the Danville (Pa.) district and Thoman was arrested there late Sunday when a trooper noticed his blackened hands.

At first he denied his guilt, but the questioning troopers met his protestations of innocence by glaring fixedly at his blackened hands until he confessed, they said.

Thomas also admitted sending extortion letters to four other wealthy Pennsylvanians, according to the police, saying the he needed the money to build a home.

Hoover Facing Problems Of Funds, Prohibition Rift, Economic Ills; Money For '32 Campaign Is Lacking

By Byron Price

President Hoover begin his second campaign for the presidency with certain important tasks definitely cut out for him.

The wounds left by the prohibition duel at the Chicago convention may not heal easily, and directly or indirectly the leader of the party will find himself obliged to do what he can to alleviate them.

He will be expected likewise to put before the voters a new, long-time program of rehabilitation, projecting into the future the lessons of two and a half years of economic adversity.

In the matter of internal party affairs alone, he and his advisors will be compelled to do something about campaign financing, for the republican treasury is badly drained and prospective contributions are few and far between.

These are only a few of the problems Mr. Hoover faces as he accepts once more the sandard of republicanism. Many others of a less pressing character already are on the waiting list, and still more are sure to appear as the campaign warms up.

Prohibition Question

Those who know the president's mind do not expect him to do much publicly about the prohibition issue.

He talked very little about it in his campaign speeches four years ago, and this time he is on still more delicate ground, after what happened in Chicago.

Through his lieutenants, however, he unquestionably will seek to restore the harmony that was rudely shattered in the process of writing a prohibition plank. It was in this same indirect fashion that he tried hard to keep peace at the time the plank was being written. He was surprised at the outcome, for he had expected no real flare-up over the resubmission proposal as first presented.

The guess of those who have followed the whole course of the question directly in his speech of acceptance, and then depend on quiet negotiation to get recalcitrants back into line.

Looking To 1937

For a long time Mr. Hoover has been studying how a long-term economic plan might be applied, not only to cure present conditions but to guard against their return.

He has hinted at the trend of his thoughts once or twice in public utterances, but there is no evidence that a rounded-out program has yet taken shape in his mind.

When he bids for another four years of power, he will come before the country in a slightly different character.

He will be looking to March 4, 1937, not merely to the end of his present administration. Without doubt he will discuss national problems in that light, particularly the national problem of a new economic deal.

Filling The Warchest

The question where the campaign money is coming from is more acute than party leaders like to admit. Lean times never conduce to fat political treasuries, especially for the party in power.

One business man of national reputation who raised $200,000 for the republican party four years ago and whose home town has been particularly hard hit by the depression, has served notice he does not know where to turn for a single dollar now.

Of course it is not that hopeless everywhere, and the general expectation is that republican manna will arrive, in moderate amount, if the petitioning is sufficiently earnest.

ALTER PROGRAM IN GRADUATION

School Exercises No Longer Follow Once Universal System In Graduation.

Because of its originality, national attention of educators has been drawn to a new type of promotion and commencement program that has been developed in recent years for the public schools of Pennsylvania. The plan for breaking away from the old, stereotyped commencement program has proved so popular that a bulletin on the subject has just been issued by the state department of public instruction.

Commencements in a large number of Pennsylvania public high schools this year have featured the George Washington bicentennial theme as suggested by the department. In the same manner, the observances next year will center on the theme of the development of Pennsylvania since the 1932-33 school year William Penn will be appropriately honored. Next October 24 marks the 250th anniversary of the landing of Penn.

Bulletin Gives Types

The purpose of the departmental bulletin, according to State Superintendent James N. Rule, is to make generally available the various types of promotion and commencement exercises, developed in accordance with modern principles governing this phase of the school program. Programs from a number of Pennsylvania schools have been included in the bulletin, selected with care from both large and small schools.

"Faculty supervision on commencement programs should be reduced to a minimum," said Dr. Rule. "Guidance should not be lacking, for it is essential to successful school work. Contrast the old and the new programs. The old was planned by school officials, consisted chiefly of an 'address' by an imported speaker, was a precise repetition from year to year and centered about no special or helpful topic. The new program is planned by graduates, executed by graduates, is original and attractive and centers about a topic of interest to pupils, parents and community. It also is used as an opportunity for self-activity training by graduates, secures their active interest and that of the community, interprets vital school activities to the citizens, receives preparation by large numbers of people throughout the year, and utilizes the resources of the school, home and community."

ROAD WORKERS ARE CAREFUL

Many Precautions Necessary In Safeguarding Highway Road Builders.

Safeguarding from injury an army of workers who number from 8,000 to 32,000 is a formidable job, is evidenced by a report of the Pennsylvania department of highways' safety engineer, Sam S. Lewis, the secretary, said today. Aside from conservation of life and limb, safety regulations show a profit in insurance rate reduction.

Drawn from all walks of life, every trade and profession, many road workers found construction work a new experience. A typical payroll lists men who, until lately, were miners, grocers, accountants, salesmen, railroaders, conductors, stationary engineers, bank clerks and mechanics of varied types.

Special rules and practices were necessary to prevent this mass of employes from hurting themselves or co-workers, few of whom were skilled with tools and machinery. An example was the comparatively simple—but laborious—operation of making small stones out of large ones by swinging a sledge hammer. Flying particles make this highly dangerous to the eyes, but 7,000 pairs of goggles issued to workers eliminate the hazard. Foremen found it necessary to space the workers carefully, lest they swing enthusiastically and strike their neighbors.

Safe Equipment

Accident prevention begins with the purchase of equipment. Accepted types of guards are specified with the purchase order. Motor equipment must be supplied with starters, and all older equipment owned by the department is rapidly being equipped with starters, to avoid injuries while cranking.

Strange as it may seem, some of the workers were too anxious to lift heavy materials; only alert foremen prevent them from sustaining injuries in this manner. The fallacy of hurrying is another practice carefully curbed.

Another safeguard is the rule that all nails must be removed from used lumber before storage or discard. Workers are required to protect themselves by placing signs for traffic when they are working in the roadway. This also serves as protection to motorists.

Responsibility for safety enforcement is delegated through the engineers and foremen, who are held accountable for all accidents. Workers are warned that it is a punishable offense to neglect reporting an injury, no matter how trifling it appears, and to apply for first-aid treatment.

Governor Pinchot displayed a personal interest in the workers by issuing orders that "workers must be given an opportunity to make good" and should be given time to become hardened to the work.

Arkansas Tourney Draws Tennis Stars

Texarkana, Ark. (AP)—The annual Arkansas Men's tennis association tournament set for June 23 to July 1 here will draw contenders from several southwestern states.

While it is an Arkansas state event, the tournament is open to amateurs from all states, and at present Texas and Oklahoma stars hold the championships.

John McDirmiad of Fort Worth is singles champion and Lowe Krunkle and Charles Davis of Oklahoma City hold the doubles title. They won in last year's tournament at Fort Smith.

Arch Holder of Shreveport, La., 1928 champion, has indicated he will enter this year, leading a large delegation of Louisiana players to the meet.

The University of North Carolina awarded 10 monograms to basketball players, nine in wrestling and eight in boxing.

"Casual" Drivers Cause Many Crashes

The bureau of highway patrol and safety is trying to ascertain if the "casual" driver is responsible for many of the week-end and holiday automobile accidents.

The "casual" driver, as explained by Walter W. Matthews, chief of the safety division, is the one who works hard during the week and uses his car only on Saturday or Sunday, or take a long trip over the week-end. Many such drivers are fatigued at the start, Matthews said. They continue to become more fatigued as the trip progresses and because of lack of daily experience at the wheel are unable to properly judge speed and distance, he asserted.

The investigation may show, it is believed, that many head-on collisions and wrecks where one car "side-swiped" another were due to fatigue and inability to judge speed or distance. Skill is needed more today than ever before, Matthews believes because of the number of high-speed cars on the highways.

FREEZE FILIPINO FRUIT

Manila (AP)—A new process of freezing the mango which may better preserve this tropical "tree-melon" for shipment to temperate zones has been announced by the insular department of agriculture. Secretary Rafael Alunan says the system will preserve the taste and texture of the fruit.

Scholastic Winner

Paul Cauffiel Louther, of Johnstown, Pa., who won the $6,000 Pennsylvania scholarship in the Culver Military Academy at Culver, Ind., offered to the winner of a statewide contest. There were 404 competitors for the prize.

Louther stood highest in exacting scientific mental and physical tests applied in preliminary and final examinations. He is the son of Mrs. Isabella C. Louther, of 526 Park Avenue, Johnstown, and is 14 years old. He will enter the Academy next September.

The scholarship covers all expenses in Culver for three years and is one of the most valuable offered in the United States. It is one of twelve created by the board of trustees of the Academy in memory of Mrs. Emily Jane Culver, wife of the school's founder.

Care In Mowing Helps Save Game

The game commission in an appeal today asked farmers to watch carefully for nesting quail, ringnecked pheasants and rabbits when they mow their fields this summer. Too often these valuable game creatures either are killed or badly crippled by the sharp knives and when this occurs, the farmer loses a valuable ally, officials said. Many farmers, however, recognize this fact and usually keep a sharp lookout for nesting birds or animals and, after they locate a nest, mow around it, leaving enough cover to protect the eggs and young.

A "flushing bar" which extends forward in front of the knives is now available for attaching to mowers, and it pushes off their nests any game creatures in its path. This contrivance is already being used extensively by a great many farmers and can be constructed easily.

ISLAND HOME FOR O'NEILLS

Author's Moods And Tastes Reflected In 20-room Residence.

Sea Island Beach, Ga. (AP).—Here among the moss-draped sanctuaries, restless waves and shifting sand dunes, Eugene O'Neill, the dramatist, is building a house.

It is not an ordinary home, for it reflects the tastes and moods of both the playwright and his wife, Carlotta Monterey O'Neill, the former actress. It will contain 22 rooms.

It is not to be a social rendezvous but a workshop, livable, lovely and a world all its own with complete seclusion wrought on all but the seaward side by a wall of towering oleanders.

There will be a full view of the sea through the loggia of the home and from the graduated terraces, with only a few scattering palmettos to stay the sometimes brisk sea winds.

The O'Neills decided to build a home here, when they came to Sea Island Beach a few months ago, when the dramatist fled from the laudations that attended his production of "Mourning Becomes Electra." Mrs. O'Neill said this island seemed a sort of fulfilment of the "blessed islands" about which he spoke so often in the trilogy.

The new home is Spanish peasant style of architecture. It contains only one social room, a huge living room, tiny guest cabins with built-in "bunks," and two complete and very spacious suites.

O'Neill's own room is a tremendous one with an adjoining study, whose appointments will be suggestive of the sea, which leads to a sun deck which gives a far-reaching view for miles of land and sea.

A courtyard fringed with Christmas berry and lined with azaleas will form the inviting entrance while leading from the passage will be the terrace. Outlining the patio will be shrubs and flowers to lend color and fragrance and beauty.

ANTI-FASCISTS IN MILAN FIDGET ON ANXIOUS SEAT

Milan, Italy (AP)—Italians whose names are on the mailing lists of newspapers, banned for their opposition to the fascist regime and now printed across the border, are uneasy.

A copy of one of the prohibited sheets which fell into the hands of the police carried an appeal to its subscribers to pay their back subscriptions and threatened to publish the names and addresses of delinquents.

If the list is published it is good for a sentence to Lipari Island for any one named.

New Tax Bill

culated to provide further revenues of $132,500,000.

10 P. C. Levy On Admissions

The tax on admissions is applicable at the rate of one per cent for each ten cents or fraction thereof on charges above forty cents. Admissions not only to theaters but "to any place" are affected. The tax must be collected from the persons paying the admissions, and persons, except employes, admitted free or at reduced rates must pay the tax.

Certain exemptions are made in favor of religious, educational or charitable organizations, except at wrestling, prize fighting, boxing or sparring matches, or other pulgistic exhibitions. The regulations made public today provide no exemption for college athletic games or for those operated by the government.

The tax on tickets sold for more than the established price is 10 per cent o fthe excess remaining after the fixed price and the tax have been deducted. This tax which has been in effect since June 6, is paid by the seller.

Social Club Dues Taxed

Dues and initiation fees to any social, athletic or sporting club or organization are taxable at the rate of 10 per cent if the dues of an active resident annual member are in excess of $25 per year, and if initiation dues amount to more than $10.

Exempted from the provisions are amounts paid to a fraternal society, order or association, operating under the lodge system, or to any local fraternal organization among the schools and colleges.

Life membership costs are not taxable, but the holders are required to pay a tax equivalent to that paid by annual members for dues or membership fees other than assessments.

Increased postage is not to go into effect until next month.

Relief Should Come From New Economy Action

Harrisburg, June 20 (AP)—Two groups of legislators in conference here today considered recommendations that any state unemployment relief fund to be provided at a proposed special session should come from economy in the cost of government.

Relief program committees representing rural legislators and the powerful Talbot-Turner bloc in separate meetings today recommended economy in government and revision of the present departmental appropriations to provide relief funds rather than increased taxation.

The recommendation will be presented for approval of the two respective groups at separate meetings this afternoon prior to the resumption of the governor's conference with administration officials and political and legislative leaders.

The governor's suggestion for bond issues and a state income tax will be considered.

DUBLIN POOR BUILD ALTARS

City Seething With Anxiety Over Opening Of Religious Congress.

Dublin, June 20 (AP)—Dublin had its first glimpse Sunday of the sheen and luster the Eucharistic congress this week will bring, for many of the prelates had arrived and appeared in the services Sunday.

And the city was made aware, too, of the religious significance of the congress, for in the morning there was general communion of men throughout the island and the conclusion of retreats for men in the afternoon.

Dublin's slums were seething with color in anticipation of the congress even as were the main streets of the city, for the poor had been saving their pennies from the dole and merger wages for six months.

British Flag Missing

Where they could not afford bunting banners, they used bits of colored glass and mirrors stuck in plaster, or even painted crude mottoes.

In many of the mean streets, the poor built altars, which constantly were the scenes of impromptu prayers.

The flags of every nation were used in Dublin's decorations Sunday save the British Union Jack. There was not a solitary representative of the king's flag visible, apparently reflecting the bitterness of the current dispute over the oath of allegiance to the king.

(Associated Press Editor's Note —The papal legate to the congress, Lorenzo Cardinal Lauri, passed through London Sunday en route from Rome and received a tumultous ovation from thousands, who fought to kiss his ring and robe.)

Special Services Held

At 8 o'clock Sunday evening a triduum for the success of the congress began in all churches of the Dublin archdiocese, with special Eucharistic services and music. The triduum devations continued today and will be concluded Tuesday, the day before the congress officially opens.

Dublin had its first opportunity to show a civic and mass hospitality to a church dignitary when Cardinal Lauri arrived today at Kingstown.

CRASH REPORT PROVES FALSE

Two Planes Fail To Find Craft Reported Fallen On Sunday.

Reports that a plane had fallen into the mountains near Marysville Sunday afternoon sent two ships from the Penn-Harris airport, east of Paxtang, on a searching flight that revealed no wrecked airplane.

While the two ships were in the air, officials at the airport recalled that Sherman Lutz, of State College, and former mechanic at the local airport, had taken off for the the Centre county town about 1:30 o'clock, the time the plane was supposed to have fallen. They knew that Lutz had been visiting friends near Marysville and, in the absence of any evidence of a crash, expressed the belief that Lutz had flown low in that vicinity in a goodby message and then continued to State college. Although they had not received word of Lutz's arrival, airport officials said that the absence of word that he had failed to complete his flight indicated he had made the trip safely.

One of the ships that took to the air after the report was received belongs to Robert P. Hoover, Harrisburg. C. W. Hunter, chief pilot at the airport, piloted it and Hoover accompanied him. The other was a ship belonging to Robert P. Hoover, Jr., and was piloted by the owner.

Paul Jones, Houston, Texas, wrestler, reported his pocket was picked of a $1,000 ring while on a visit in Phoenix, Arizona.

ARENDTSVILLE BLANKED, 7-0

Gardners Springs Surprise Victory In County League Contest.

Pounding over six runs in a big third inning rally, Gardners pulled a surprise in their league game Saturday at Arendtsville by blanking the apple-pickers, 7-0.

Swope pitched a great brand of ball for the victors, keeping eight hits well spaced. Guy Raff went the route for Arendtsville and excepting for a bad third inning, hurled a nice game.

Every man in the Gardners lineup had one or more hits with the exception of Hoffman. J. Raff led the hitting attack with three safeties in four trips to the plate.

Defeat knocked Arendtsville from first place and gave Cashtown the top rung by virtue of its victory over Gettysburg.

MAN SUICIDES ON SON'S GRAVE

Hagerstown Father Shoots Himself Grieving Over Death Of Boy.

Hagerstown, June 29—The body of Russell Corteney Bassett, 41, was found over the grave of his son in Rose Hill cemetery Sunday morning about 8 o'clock, with .38 calibre bullet wounds in his head and stomach. A revolver was clutched in his hand.

Mr. Bassett resided in the Highberger apartment on South Potomas street and was an employe of the Byron shoe factory on West Antietam street.

The body was discovered Sunday morning by Superintendent Hartle of the cemetery who immediately notified police. Magistrate Richard Duffey, acting coroner; Lieut. Frank K. Williams and Patrolman Jacob Sailes responded. Coroner Duffey gave a verdict of suicide and held an inquest unnecessary.

The body was found over the grave of his son, Jackie, who died about eight years ago. Constant grief over the death of the son, his only child, is believed to have prompted the man to end his life.

Police said Mr. Bassett apparently shot himself in the side and then fired the fatal bullet into his head. The body was removed to the funeral home of A. K. Coffman.

Woman Sentenced On Murder Charge

Milford, Pa., June 20 (AP).—Mrs. Bertha Armbruster who was convicted in May, 1931 of murder in the second degree for the shooting of Wellington De Groat was sentenced today by Judge Samuel E. Shull to 6 to 15 years in the Eastern prison.

The court ordered the sentence to date from January 18, 1931 when the woman was first committed to the county jail here. After being convicted Mrs. Armbruster was sent to the Allentown state hospital for observation. She was returned to the county jail here last April.

De Groat was hunting deer in December, 1930 when he followed a wounded animal into the woods and did not return. A searching party the next day found him dead a short distance from the home of Mrs. Armbruster who lived alone on a small farm. Because she had threatened hunters for trespassing the woman was arrested. Experts testified that the shot which killed De Groat was fired from a rifle she possessed.

FAIRFIELD COPS FROM BENDERS

Bill McCleaf Twirls Superb Ball To Gain 8 To 1 Victory.

With Bill McCleaf pitching one of the nicest games turned in in the county league this season, Fairfield played like champions to defeat Bendersville at Bendersville Saturday afternoon, 8-1.

McCleaf yielded but two safeties, one of which was a triple by Lerew. Lerew then scored the only run for the losers when Herring erred at third.

Bendersville put up a sloppy exhibition, committing a total of nine errors, seven of which came in the sixth inning to give the victors six runs to sew up the game.

J. Reindollar copped the batting honors of the day, connecting for two singles and a double.

Some sterling relief hurling by Bill Kuhn in the ninth inning enabled Cashtown to nose out Gettysburg here Saturday in a county league baseball game, 8-7.

Kuhn replaced Starner in the ninth with Gettysburg's tying run on second and none out and so effectively did he twirl that the runner died on third with the "big guns" of the local attack failing to come through.

Once again the local team outhit their rivals, garnishing thirteen safeties to the visitors' nine, but sluggish fielding in the early frames enabled Cashtown to walk off with the verdict.

Few Earned Runs

Only two earned runs were made by Cashtown and these were of the tainted variety. Gettysburg scored five pure runs.

Doubles by Roddy and Kitzmiller pushed over a run for the locals in the first inning.

Cashtown scored twice in the second. Two were out when Rebert smote a single to center. J. Bream lifted an easy fly to left but K. Knox misjudged the ball and it went for a double, Rebert scoring. P. Bream singled to center scoring J. Bream. Kuhn then forced Bream, Miller to Moser.

Wild Third

The visitors tallied thrice in the third. Carbaugh was saved on Miller's wild heave. D. Bream got a lucky single in center which Roddy and Miller left fall between them. Hartman walked, filling the sacks. Starner rolled to Moser who threw wild at the plate trying to get Carbaugh, D. Bream also scoring. Hartman scored on Kitzmiller's chuck to the plate after Bucher had grounded out, Fleming to Kitzmiller.

Two singles, a sacrefice, an error and a fielder's choice gave the visitors another pair of runs in the fifth.

Fleming's double, a walk to Moser and Roddy's single, coupled with Bucher's wild throw, produced two Gettysburg runs in the fifth.

Gettysburg kept pecking away at the enemy lead and went into the ninth trailing by two runs. Roddy led off with a single and Kitzmiller doubled him home. Kuhn replaced Starner and Knox rolled to D. Bream, Kitzmiller moving to third. Kller popped to the infield for the second out and Dickson fanned for the final out.

SYNOPSIS: Warned not to betray the location of a mysterious island where Limpy Ashwood, a cultured gang leader is holding six prisoners for ransom, Jerry Calhoun hopes his friends, Emory Battle and Stevens, a detective, will rescue him. He has come incognito, planning to help one of the prisoners, Nancy Wentworth.

Chapter 19

AN ISLAND PRISON

There, on the beach was their monoplane. Half-way to the house, a little procession, led by Emory and Stevens, was plodding through the sawgrass. Behind his two companions strode four guards, one of whom held an automatic.

"Well, well, well, Captain Calhoun!" Ashwood turned to Jerry with a sardonic smile. "Now that I observe your comrade, Lieutenant Battles, coming to join our merry group, it seems hardly worth while for you to remain incognito, and, as I live and breathe, if this isn't the admirable Stevens! Well, well, what a wonderful little reunion!"

Emory waved as unabashed greeting to Jerry, then fell to studying the face of the white-haired cripple. Stevens, looking about him with his faded blue eyes, caught Jerry's glance.

"Joke's on us, kid," he said gloomily. "I'm losing my grip." Then, turning to Ashwood, he smiled amiably: "Hello, Limpy. Haven't seen you in a long time—professionally, that is."

"Let's hope that this isn't a professional visit," Ashwood protested suavely. "After you have conferred with the dictates of your conscience, you will realize that you may as well put your silver-plated shield in my safe and enjoy yourself for the remainder of your stay on the island. I've always longed to make your acquaintance under suitable circumstances, you know."

"Listen, Limpy," said Stevens, drily, "I'm getting pretty old to change my ways. If you are still free a couple of years from now—which I doubt—come out and pay me a visit at my pecan grove in California. Then we can be good and sociable. But between now and then I'm on Uncle Sam's payroll and I got to try to earn my pay, which God knows, isn't much."

"Dear, dear, such nobility of character!" signed Ashwood, plaintively. "It is so stimulating. I'm sure you will enjoy meeting Mr. Lucci."

"No," grunted Stevens, "I don't even enjoy thinking about him, much less meeting him. I'm going to have to kill that feller some day."

"Please wait," cried the cripple in mock alarm, "until I have collected by final board bill from his loving and loyal friends."

"I've got it!" interrupted Emory, suddenly. "Jerry, this is the bird we rescued from the British M P.'s after the big party at the Claridge," he turned again to Ashwood. "My God, you've changed! What in the world happened to you to make you look like this?"

The scene came back to Jerry in a flash. A gay, rollicking British pilot, who had been drifting about with them all evening, from cafe to cafe. Then, after they had parted with assurances of life-long affection and esteem, the two Yanks had heard a sudden uproar and had raced through the darkened streets to find the young lieutenant in the clutches of three burly military police. With shouts of joy Jerry and Emory had fallen upon the patrol and, after a glorious fight, had saved their new friend from a probable court martial. After another drink together, the three had departed for their respective units. And here they were again, reunited at last—and under what circumstances!

Ashwood looked first at Emory, then at Jerry, thoughtfully.

"Come in, gentlemen. We'll have a drink and a little talk." Nodding to the guards, who departed forthwith, he led the way to the dining room.

Ashwood was first to speak.

"All of us make mistakes at one time or another, but I had complimented myself that this little retreat of mine was well hidden. Since frankness is, at this moment, desirable, I wonder if you would mind telling he how you found this island?"

"Simplicity itself," grinned Jerry unhesitatingly. "We flew over you when you picked up that money off Montauk point and followed you as far south at Atlantic City. We established, on that flight, the fact that your base was somewhere south of the Jersey shore. When you picked up the satched on Lake Michigan, we were flying over you at better than 20,000 feet, keeping in the sun so you wouldn't spot us. We followed you clear down to a point near Tallahassee, where we had to land. But since you were steering a perfectly straight compass course all day long, it seemed only reasonable to suppose that if we followed the same course the next morning, we'd find your hide-away sooner or later. And we did."

Ashwood smoked silently. Then he smiled wryly.

'How elementary! It is, I think, the first serious slip I have made since I entered this highly diverting profession. I should most certainly have followed an irregular course and taken more care to watch for pursuing planes. It was your altitude and position that misled me."

His thoughful eyes were fixed in a moody stare. Then, pulling himself out of his momentary abstraction, he glanced at the three with sudden decision.

"I have a proposition to make in all seriousness and I am honest when I tell you that I hope it will be accepted. This island, as a prison, is as escape-proof as the strongest cell in the Tower of London. You haven't a dog's chance to escape and I hope that you won't attempt it. It would be absolute suicide. My guards have orders to shoot to kill every time they pull trigger.

"Stevens, I have the greatest respect in the world for you. Of all the policemen and detectives of one sort or another who have tried to trace this or that little matter to me, you have come the nearest to success. But you the too late, now. I have decided that this is to be my last trick and before you have an opportunity to use the evidence you now have against me, I will be in a spot where extradition will be impossible"

He turned to Jerry.

"Calhoun, there was something about that turbulent evening we three had in London that has remained in my memory throughout these many years. As things turned out, it was the last really happy binge I ever had. Disasters of which there is no need to speak began a day or two later; things over which I had no control changed the entire course of my life. That is why, perhaps, I have a decidedly friendly feeling toward both of you.

"I am sorry that you two fellows have, by chance, been throw into this affair. I'm sorry that we are, this time, on opposite sides of the fence. You cannot possibly win. My exits are to carefully worked out."

He lighted another cigarette amid thoughtful silence. When he spoke again there was no mistaken the sincerity in his voice.

"Now here's my proposition. Give me your parole until,, for one cause or another, I permit you, voluntarily, to leave this island. I shall do so, believe me, within three weeks at the most, perhaps much sooner. If you make me this promise not to interfere you will be treated as guests and made to feel as comfortable as we know how."

Turning to Stevens, he declared candidly:

"Old man I would not suggest this if I thought you had a sporting chance of accomplishing what you are paid to do."

He glanced briefly at the other two and his voice suddenly grew hard and cold.

"The alternative, gentlemen, is this: I shall give you what freedom I can. But my men will watch you. If, at any time, you become dangerous to the success of our undertaking, we will not have the slightest hesitancy about killing you in cold blood, even though I should regret it later There is too much at stake to permit interference.

"I may add this" He leaned across the table, his mouth tight and grim. "In the past few years I have come to regard human life as a matter of the slightest possible import. The world went on merrily for hundrers of thousands of years before we gladdened it with out presence. If I am forced to kill one, or all three of you, the affairs of the world will still function without interruption. You will be mourned by a few, but in the face of the appallingly fast propagation of the human race, your loss will be slight and soon forgotten

Hollywood Sights & Sounds

By Robbin Coons

Hollywood — Film cutters are known to the fans and to many actors ony as those ogres who decorate the floors of their cubby-hole workshops with pitilessly snipped "faces."

Ambitious players have always been told to be nice to their cameraman, because there's no telling what he can make you look like if you happen to strike him as high-hat. These same players really ought to pay more attention to their cutters.

For these skilled shearers can do things t orecorded voices that hurt far more than bad lighting on a pretty face. Sometimes the tricks they can play—and don't, because they're working for a living too—would make the player wish his part in the film, face and voice, had both landed mercifully on the cutting-room floor.

Tricks In This Business

Francis Lyon, a young chap who "cuts" out at Mack Sennett's, and hopes to follow the path of Josef von Sternberg, Ernst Lubitsch, Dorothy Arzner, Richard Wallace and other one-time cutters, to a director's chair, let me in on a few tricks of the trade the other day.

Instead of handling "sound" with kid gloves as they did at first, cutters now have fun with it. They can do such things as change the pitch of an actor's voice, without even consulting the actor.

For instance, in a recent comedy Billy Bevan appears in woman's clothing but speaks in his natural deep voice. The cutters thought it would be funnier if a falsetto were use. Lyon, to save another "take" on a completed film, speeded up the film on which the dialog was recorded, re-recording at the faster speed.

Soprano Turned Bass

Reversing this process, slowing the dialog, a high soprano can be made to sound like a basso profundo!

Eliminating drawling in words, emphasizing sounds, eliminating others, inserting sounds which were not heard on the set where the film was recorded, are but a few of the "miracles" these cutters daily perform

Needless to say, they don't play tricks on unsuspecting actors unless they's for the good of the picture—but they could if they would

Washington Highlights

By Herbert Plummer

Washington — Washington observers, accustomed as they have become in the present congress of queer twists, coalitions and flip-flops, figuratively are rubbing their eyes in amazement at the latest one—

Fiorella LaGuardia in active support of admittedly one of the most severe gag rules ever jammed through the house!

The stocky, hard-hitting congressman from from New York literally has screamed in the past every time an effort has been made in the house to throttle debate. He was one of the pioneers in the movement for liberalization of house rules

But when the huge Garner relief program first came before the house he executed one of the neatest, and for him, one of the mast daring of parliamentary flip-flops

LaGuardia Admits It

He admitted it He was frank enough to shout to those inclined to jeer at him that he had been forced to forget his parliamentary scruples to obtain reliefe for those so sorely in need.

"Some of you preach that we should forget party," he chied at the republican leadership "That's exactly what I am doing in urging that this relief bill be enacted speedily."

It was perhaps unfortunate that LaGuardia, in supporting the special rule to place the Garner bill before the house, had to support one such as that one It was perhaps as drastic, a gagging as any ever accepted by the house—whether under republican or democratic leadership

Democrat admitted its severity. Republicans condemned it as a vehicle that hog-tied, strapped, bound and rendered helpless the membership of the house of representatives

Drastic Rule

The bill was considered by the house in this fashion:

Debate was limited to three hours at the conclusion of which the bill was considered as read. No amendments could be offered except at the direction of the ways and means committee (controlled by the democrats) and there could be no amendments offered to amendments.

It truly must have been a tough one for LaGuardia to swallow.

Ashwood looked first at Emory, then at Jerry, thoughtfully.

"Come in, gentlemen. We'll have a drink and a little talk." Nodding to the guards, who departed forthwith, he led the way to the dining room.

Ashwood was first to speak.

"All of us make mistakes at one time or another, but I had complimented myself that this little retreat of mine was well hidden. Since frankness is, at this moment, desirable, I wonder if you would mind telling he how you found this island?"

"Simplicity itself," grinned Jerry unhesitatingly. "We flew over you when you picked up that money off Montauk point and followed you as far south at Atlantic City. We established, on that flight, the fact that your base was somewhere south of the Jersey shore. When you picked up the satched on Lake Michigan, we were flying over you at better than 20,000 feet, keeping in the sun so you wouldn't spot us. We followed you clear down to a point near Tallahassee, where we had to land. But since you were steering a perfectly straight compass course all day long, it seemed only reasonable to suppose that if we followed the same course the next morning, we'd find your hide-away sooner or later. And we did."

Ashwood smoked silently. Then he smiled wryly.

'How elementary! It is, I think, the first serious slip I have made since I entered this highly diverting profession. I should most certainly have followed an irregular course and taken more care to watch for pursuing planes. It was your altitude and position that misled me."

His thoughful eyes were fixed in a moody stare. Then, pulling himself out of his momentary abstraction, he glanced at the three with sudden decision.

"I have a proposition to make in all seriousness and I am honest when I tell you that I hope it will be accepted. This island, as a prison, is as escape-proof as the strongest cell in the Tower of London. You haven't a dog's chance to escape and I hope that you won't attempt it. It would be absolute suicide. My guards have orders to shoot to kill every time they pull trigger.

"Stevens, I have the greatest respect in the world for you. Of all the policemen and detectives of one sort or another who have tried to trace this or that little matter to me, you have come the nearest to success. But you the too late, now. I have decided that this is to be my last trick and before you have an opportunity to use the evidence you now have against me, I will be in a spot where extradition will be impossible."

He turned to Jerry.

"Calhoun, there was something about that turbulent evening we three had in London that has remained in my memory throughout these many years. As things turned out, it was the last really happy binge I ever had. Disasters of which there is no need to speak began a day or two later; things over which I had no control changed the entire course of my life. That is why, perhaps, I have a decidedly friendly feeling toward both of you.

"I am sorry that you two fellows have, by chance, been throw into this affair. I'm sorry that we are, this time, on opposite sides of the fence. You cannot possibly win. My exits are to carefully worked out."

He lighted another cigarette amid thoughtful silence. When he spoke again there was no mistaken the sincerity in his voice.

"Now here's my proposition. Give me your parole until,, for one cause or another, I permit you, voluntarily, to leave this island. I shall do so, believe me, within three weeks at the most, perhaps much sooner. If you make me this promise not to interfere you will be treated as guests and made to feel as comfortable as we know how."

Turning to Stevens, he declared candidly:

"Old man. I would not suggest this if I thought you had a sporting chance of accomplishing what you are paid to do."

He glanced briefly at the other two and his voice suddenly grew hard and cold.

"The alternative, gentlemen, is this: I shall give you what freedom I can. But my men will watch you. If, at any time, you become dangerous to the success of our undertaking, we will not have the slightest hesitancy about killing you in cold blood, even though I should regret it later. There is too much at stake to permit interference.

"I may add this." He leaned across the table, his mouth tight and grim. "In the past few years I have come to regard human life as a matter of the slightest possible import. The world went on merrily for hundrers of thousands of years before we gladdened it with out presence. If I am forced to kill one, or all three of you, the affairs of the world will still function without interruption. You will be mourned by a few, but in the face of the appallingly fast propagation of the human race, your loss will be slight and soon forgotten.

Hollywood Sights & Sounds

By Robbin Coons

Hollywood — Film cutters are known to the fans and to many actors ony as those ogres who decorate the floors of their cubby-hole workshops with pitilessly snipped "faces."

Ambitious players have always been told to be nice to their cameraman, because there's no telling what he can make you look like if you happen to strike him as high-hat. These same players really ought to pay more attention to their cutters.

For these skilled shearers can do things t orecorded voices that hurt far more than bad lighting on a pretty face. Sometimes the tricks they can play—and don't, because they're working for a living too—would make the player wish his part in the film, face and voice, had both landed mercifully on the cutting-room floor.

Tricks In This Business

Francis Lyon, a young chap who "cuts" out at Mack Sennett's, and hopes to follow the path of Josef von Sternberg, Ernst Lubitsch, Dorothy Arzner, Richard Wallace and other one-time cutters, to a director's chair, let me in on a few tricks of the trade the other day.

Instead of handling "sound" with kid gloves as they did at first, cutters now have fun with it. They can do such things as change the pitch of an actor's voice, without even consulting the actor.

For instance, in a recent comedy Billy Bevan appears in woman's clothing but speaks in his natural deep voice. The cutters thought it would be funnier if a falsetto were use. Lyon, to save another "take" on a completed film, speeded up the film on which the dialog was recorded, re-recording at the faster speed.

Soprano Turned Bass

Reversing this process, slowing the dialog, a high soprano can be made to sound like a basso profundo!

Eliminating drawling in words, emphasizing sounds, eliminating others, inserting sounds which were not heard on the set where the film was recorded, are but a few of the "miracles" these cutters daily perform.

Needless to say, they don't play tricks on unsuspecting actors unless they's for the good of the picture—but they could if they would.

Washington Highlights

By Herbert Plummer

Washington — Washington observers, accustomed as they have become in the present congress of queer twists, coalitions and flip-flops, figuratively are rubbing their eyes in amazement at the latest one—

Fiorella LaGuardia in active support of admittedly one of the most severe gag rules ever jammed through the house!

The stocky, hard-hitting congressman from from New York literally has screamed in the past every time an effort has been made in the house to throttle debate. He was one of the pioneers in the movement for liberalization of house rules.

But when the huge Garner relief program first came before the house he executed one of the neatest, and for him, one of the mast daring of parliamentary flip-flops.

LaGuardia Admits It

He admitted it. He was frank enough to shout to those inclined to jeer at him that he had been forced to forget his parliamentary scruples to obtain reliefe for those so sorely in need.

"Some of you preach that we should forget party," he chied at the republican leadership. "That's exactly what I am doing in urging that this relief bill be enacted speedily."

It was perhaps unfortunate that LaGuardia, in supporting the special rule to place the Garner bill before the house, had to support one such as that one. It was perhaps as drastic, a gagging as any ever accepted by the house—whether under republican or democratic leadership.

Democrat admitted its severity. Republicans condemned it as a vehicle that hog-tied, strapped, bound and rendered helpless the membership of the house of representatives.

Drastic Rule

The bill was considered by the house in this fashion:

Debate was limited to three hours, at the conclusion of which the bill was considered as read. No amendments could be offered except at the direction of the ways and means committee (controlled by the democrats) and there could be no amendments offered to amendments.

It truly must have been a tough one for LaGuardia to swallow.

Examine the paper Chesterfields are rolled in. It's white . . . and pure. Now light up . . . You'll notice there's neither taste nor odor of burning paper. You get the full flavor of fine ripe tobaccos.

To make sure of purity . . . every ingredient and every method used in making Chesterfields . . . is checked by a staff of scientists.

The regulations made public today provide no exemption for college athletic games or for those operated by the government.

Life membership costs are not taxable, but the holders are required to pay a tax equivalent to that paid by annual members for dues or membership fees other than assessments.

Increased postage is not to go into effect until next month.

Relief Should Come From New Economy Action

Harrisburg, June 20 (AP)—Two groups of legislators in conference here today considered recommendations that any state unemployment relief fund to be provided at a proposed special session should come from economy in the cost of government.

Relief program committees representing rural legislators and the powerful Talbot-Turner bloc in separate meetings today recommended economy in government and revision of the present departmental appropriations to provide relief funds rather than increased taxation.

The recommendation will be presented for approval of the two respective groups at separate meetings this afternoon prior to the resumption of the governor's conference with administration officials and political and legislative leaders.

The governor's suggestion for bond issues and a state income tax will be considered.

DUBLIN POOR BUILD ALTARS

City Seething With Anxiety Over Opening Of Religious Congress.

Dublin, June 20 (AP)—Dublin had its first glimpse Sunday of the sheen and luster the Eucharistic congress this week will bring, for many of the prelates had arrived and appeared in the services Sunday.

And the city was made aware, too, of the religious significance of the congress, for in the morning there was general communion of men throughout the island and the conclusion of retreats for men in the afternoon.

Dublin's slums were seething with color in anticipation of the congress even as were the main streets of the city, for the poor had been saving their pennies from the dole and merger wages for six months.

British Flag Missing

Where they could not afford bunting banners, they used bits of colored glass and mirrors stuck in plaster, or even painted crude mottoes.

In many of the mean streets, the poor built altars, which constantly were the scenes of impromptu prayers.

The flags of every nation were used in Dublin's decorations Sunday save the British Union Jack. There was not a solitary representative of the king's flag visible, apparently reflecting the bitterness of the current dispute over the oath of allegiance to the king.

(Associated Press Editor's Note —The papal legate to the congress, Lorenzo Cardinal Lauri, passed through London Sunday en route from Rome and received a tumultous ovation from thousands, who fought to kiss his ring and robe.)

Special Services Held

At 3 o'clock Sunday evening a triduum for the success of the congress began in all churches of the Dublin archdiocese, with special Eucharistic services and music. The triduum devations continued today and will be concluded Tuesday, the day before the congress officially opens.

Dublin had its first opportunity to show a civic and mass hospitality to a church dignitary when Cardinal Lauri arrived today at Kingstown.

CRASH REPORT PROVES FALSE

Two Planes Fail To Find Craft Reported Fallen On Sunday.

Reports that a plane had fallen into the mountains near Marysville Sunday afternoon sent two ships from the Penn-Harris airport, east of Paxtang, on a searching flight that revealed no wrecked airplane.

While the two ships were in the air, officials at the airport recalled that Sherman Lutz, of State College, and former mechanic at the local airport, had taken off for the the Centre county town about 1:30 o'clock, the time the plane was supposed to have fallen. They knew that Lutz had been visiting friends near Marysville and, in the absence of any evidence of a crash, expressed the belief that Lutz had flown low in that vicinity in a goodby message and then continued to State college. Although they had not received word of Lutz's arrival, airport officials said that the absence of word that he had failed to complete his flight indicated he had made the trip safely.

One of the ships that took to the air after the report was received belongs to Robert P. Hoover, Harrisburg. C. W. Hunter, chief pilot at the airport, piloted it and Hoover accompanied him. The other was a ship belonging to Robert P. Hoover, Jr., and was piloted by the owner.

Paul Jones, Houston, Texas, wrestler, reported his pocket was picked of a $1,000 ring while on a visit in Phoenix, Arizona.

ARENDTSVILLE BLANKED, 7-0

Gardners Springs Surprise Victory In County League Contest.

Pounding over six runs in a big third inning rally, Gardners pulled a surprise in their league game Saturday at Arendtsville by blanking the apple-pickers, 7-0.

Swope pitched a great brand of ball for the victors, keeping eight hits well spaced. Guy Raff went the route for Arendtsville and excepting for a bad third-inning, hurled a nice game.

Every man in the Gardners lineup had one or more hits with the exception of Hoffman. J. Raff led the hitting attack, with three safeties in four trips to the plate.

Defeat knocked Arendtsville from first place and gave Cashtown the top rung by virtue of its victory over Gettysburg.

MAN SUICIDES ON SON'S GRAVE

Hagerstown Father Shoots Himself Grieving Over Death Of Boy.

Hagerstown, June 29—The body of Russell Corteney Bassett, 41, was found over the grave of his son in Rose Hill cemetery Sunday morning about 8 o'clock, with .38 calibre bullet wounds in his head and stomach. A revolver was clutched in his hand.

Mr. Bassett resided in the Hugherger apartment on South Potomas street and was an employe of the Byron shoe factory on West Antietam street.

The body was discovered Sunday morning by Superintendent Hartle of the cemetery who immediately notified police. Magistrate Richard Duffey, acting coroner; Lieut. Frank K. Williams and Patrolman Jacob Sailes responded. Coroner Duffey gave a verdict of suicide and held an inquest unnecessary.

The body was found over the grave of his son, Jackie, who died about eight years ago. Constant grief over the death of the son, his only child, is believed to have prompted the man to end his life.

Police said Mr. Bassett apparently shot himself in the side and then fired the fatal bullet into his head. The body was removed to the funeral home of A. K. Coffman.

Woman Sentenced On Murder Charge

Milford, Pa., June 20 (AP).—Mrs. Bertha Armbruster who was convicted in May, 1931 of murder in the second degree for the shooting of Wellington De Groat was sentenced today by Judge Samuel E. Shull to 6 to 15 years in the Eastern prison.

The court ordered the sentence to date from January 18, 1931 when the woman was first committed to the county jail here. After being convicted Mrs. Armbruster was sent to the Allentown state hospital for observation. She was returned to the county jail here last April.

De Groat was hunting deer in December, 1930 when he followed a wounded animal into the woods and did not return. A searching party the next day found him dead a short distance from the home of Mrs. Armbruster who lived alone on a small farm. Because she had threatened hunters for trespassing the woman was arrested. Experts testified that the shot which killed De Groat was fired from a rifle she possessed.

FAIRFIELD COPS FROM BENDERS

Bill McCleaf Twirls Superb Ball To Gain 8 To 1 Victory.

With Bill McCleaf pitching one of the nicest games turned in in the county league this season, Fairfield played like champions to defeat Bendersville at Bendersville Saturday afternoon, 8-1.

McCleaf yielded but two safeties, one of which was a triple by Lerew. Lerew then scored the only run for the losers when Herring erred at third.

Bendersville put up a sloppy exhibition, committing a total of nine errors, seven of which came in the sixth inning to give the victors six runs to sew up the game.

J. Reindollar copped the batting honors of the day, connecting for two singles and a double.

Some sterling relief hurling by Bill Kuhn in the ninth inning enabled Cashtown to nose out Gettysburg here Saturday in a county league baseball game, 8-7.

Kuhn replaced Starner in the ninth with Gettysburg's tying run on second and none out and so effectively did he twirl that the runner died on third with the "big guns" of the local attack failing to come through.

Once again the local team outhit their rivals, garnishing thirteen safeties to the visitors' nine, but sluggish fielding in the early frames enabled Cashtown to walk off with the verdict.

Few Earned Runs

Only two earned runs were made by Cashtown and these were of the tainted variety. Gettysburg scored five pure runs.

Doubles by Roddy and Kitzmiller pushed over a run for the locals in the first inning.

Cashtown scored twice in the second. Two were out when Rebert smote a single to center. J. Bream lifted an easy fly to left but K. Knox misjudged the ball and it went for a double, Rebert scoring. P. Bream singled to center scoring J. Bream. Kuhn then forced Bream, Miller to Moser.

Wild Third

The visitors tallied thrice in the third. Carbaugh was saved on Miller's wild heave. D. Bream got a lucky single in center which Roddy and Miller left fall between them. Hartman walked, filling the sacks. Starner rolled to Moser who threw wild at the plate trying to get Carbaugh, D. Bream also scoring. Hartman scored on Kitzmiller's chuck to the plate after Bucher had grounded out, Fleming to Kitzmiller.

Two singles, a sacrefice, an error and a fielder's choice gave the visitors another pair of runs in the fifth.

Fleming's double, a walk to Moser and Roddy's single, coupled with Bucher's wild throw, produced two Gettysburg runs in the fifth.

Gettysburg kept pecking away at the enemy lead and went into the ninth trailing by two runs. Roddy led off with a single and Kitzmiller doubled him home. Kuhn replaced Starner and Knox rolled to D. Bream, Kitzmiller moving to third. Kller popped to the infield for the second out and Dickson fanned for the final out.

Highly Important From England: Abandonment of the Reform bill, resignation of the Grey ministry, appointment of the Wellington ministry, the ship Marmora, at New York, brings a Liverpool paper of the 14th of May.

The reform bill was defeated in the house of lords on the 12th by a majority of forty. On the 13th news was received at Liverpool. Placards were posted around the streets with the heading—"Down with the House of Lords" It is said that the king refused to sign the papers for the new peers whom Earl Grey wished to create to carry the bill. The ministers thereupon resigned, and a new ministry was to be created, at the head of which the Duke of Wellington would again be placed.

The king came to London on the 12th, on which day the Duke of Wellington was appointed first lord of the treasury, and kissed his majesty's hand on entering upon the duties of premier.

Important Intelligence from France: The ship Henri IV, Captain Rockett, arrived from Havre and brought the editors of the New York American Advocate Paris files to the 8th and Havre papers to the 10th ult.

The endeavorers of the Carlist faction have met with a signal overthrow by the arrest of the Duchess De Berri. Driven by the winds and the waves upon the coast of a country, the tranquillity of which she was endeavoring to disturb, and seized in the very act of treason, her life would have been the forfeit, had the laws, created under the auspices of the fallen dynasty, been carried into effect for the punishment of a traitress. In the reigns of Louis XVIII and Charles X, had a member of the Bonaparte family engaged in an attempt to subvert the existing order, and been thrown upon the French soil by the anger of the elements, a short trial and a short shrift would have been accorded to the unfortunate. We rejoice in the clemency of the government of France.

We have heard from various sources for some time past that there was a lamentable desecration of the Sabbath by visitors to the beautiful spot "Evergreen Cemetery." Its attractions are great and we wonder not that it should be a place of general resort, but we learn that the conduct of many who visit it on the Sabbath is of the most reprehensible character and calls earnestly for vigorous action on the part of those who have the direction of affairs there.

Monumental Daguerreotype Cases. Attention is called to an advertisement in our paper today of Mr. Spangler, of Abbottstown, who has purchased the patent for this country for attaching daguerreotype cases to monuments. The idea is a beautiful one, and we should be pleased to see it introduced into our cemeteries. Besides it is rather an ornament to the monument. Bonus Seekers Leaving Capital

Washington, June 20 (AP)—Discouraged war veterans who came to Washington in hope of receiving cash for their war service certificates straggled homeward Saturday as their leaders vainly tried to held their ranks intact.

The senate's overwhelming defeat of thebonus payment measure Friday night took its toll of the ranks and soon after daylight the roads leading away from Washington were dotted with groups of weary, rain-soaked veterans leaving the nation's capital behind them.

Police said the veterans were leaving in large groups but leaders in the veterans' camp said that only about 150 had gone home to recruit more men for their army.

Bad weather which has continued for a week discouraged many who left individually for their home. The veterans' headquarters claimed 23,000 men were in the city but this figure was more than double the number estimated Saturday by police.

Open to me the gates of righteousness: I will go into them, and I will praise the Lord:

This gate of the Lord, into which the righteous shall enter.

I will praise thee: for thou hast heard me, and art become my salvation.

The stone which the builders refused is become the head stone of the corner.

This is the Lord's doing; it is marvellous in our eyes.

This is the day which the Lord hath made; we will rejoice and be glad in it.

Save now, I beseech thee, O Lord:, I beseech thee, send now prosperity.

Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord: we have blessed you out of the house of the Lord.

God is the Lord, which hath shewed us light: bind the sacrifice with cords, even unto the horns of the altar.

Thou are my God, and I will praise thee: thou art my God, I will exalt thee.

O give thanks unto the Lord; for he is good: for his mercy endureth for ever.

A SUMMER PARTY

(Afternoon or evening)

Frozen Fruit Salad Butterhorns
Strawberry Sherbet
Angel Food Cake
Coffee Salted Nuts

Frozen Fruit Salad for 8

1 cup mayonnaise, 1 cup whipped cream, 1½ cups diced canned pineapple, 1 cup diced peaches, 1 cup diced pears, ½ cup red cherries.

Mix mayonnaise and cream. Add rest of ingredients. Pour into tray in mechanical refrigerator and in 4 hours salad will be frozen. Serve on lettuce and top with more mayonnaise.

Butterhorns

(32 tasty rolls)

1 cake compressed yeast, 2 tablespoons lukewarm water, 1 cup milk (lukewarm), ½ cup fat, ½ cup sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, 2 eggs, 4½ cups flour.

Crumble yeast and add water. Let stand 5 minutes. Add milk, fat (melted), sugar, salt, eggs and ½ the flour. Beat 2 minutes. Add rest of flour, mixing thoroughly.

Place in greased bowl. Cover with cloth and let rise in moderately warm place until dough has doubled in bulk. It will require about 4 hours for dough to rise. Divide dough in two parts and roll out each part until circles 8 inches in diameter have been formed.

Use sharp knife and cut circles into halves. Then cut each half into 8 pieces, making 16 triangular shaped pieces of dough from each circle. The dough is rather soft so that even pieces can not be cut, but by pulling with fingers the dough can be made as desired.

Beginning at wide side of the triangular shaped pieces roll up each piece. Place butterhorns side by side on a greased pan and let rise until doubled in bulk. It will require about 4 hours to rise. Cover butterhorns with cloth to prevent crust from forming on tops. Bake 20 minutes in moderate oven. A good fat mixture is made by using half butter and half lard.

IRISH CHIEF DEFIES CROWN

DeValera Seeks United Irish Republic; Does Not Stray From Stand.

London, June 20 (AP)—The commons was told Friday that the ultimate aim of President de Valera was a united Irish republic recognizing the British crown "in certain circumstances."

J. H. Thomas, secretary for dominions, said the president of the Free State made this assertion to him in Dublin last week during negotiations to settle differences.

Mr. Thomas said Mr. de Valera envisioned an Irish republic, including Ulster, which would be called, understood and accepted as a republic.

Plan Held Possible

Mr. de Valera was pictured as recognizing circumstances in which the British commonwealth would act as a unit for external purposes. Then "His Majesty the King would be recognized as the head" of the British commonwealth.

Mr. Thomas told the commons he had informed Mr. de Valera that it would do no good to talk about such a plan, because neither this not any other British government would agree to such a proposal.

The dominion secretary's remark came when he read a dispatch from the head of the Irish Free State during a debate on the Irish question.

The purport of this dispatch, Mr. Thomas said, was that De Valera had not deviated one iota from his original position on the abolition of the Irish oath of allegiance and the land annuity payments.

The Misses Mary and Lois Musselman have returned to the home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. I. Z. Musselman, from an extended western trip by automobile. They spent some time with their brother and siter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Musselman, at La Junta, Colorado, and visited relatives in Smithville, Ohio; Elkhart, Indiana; Morton, Illinois; Waterloo, Iowa; Burdette, Kansas. While in Colorado they visited points of interest, such as Royal Gorge, the Arkansas river, Colorado Springs, Garden of the Gods, Squirrel Creek Canyon, San Isabel forest, and the Corley Mountain highway, returning through the desolate plains of Colorado and Kansas, Missouri, Iowa and Illinois. Four days were spent at Goshen college, Goshen, Indiana, where Miss Mary Musselman was a former student and graduate, attending the commencement activities with friends. They were accompanied home by Mr. and rMs. Howard Musselman, of La Junta, Colorado, and Miss Martha Yoder, of Wooster, Ohio, who spent several days here as guests of the Musselman family. Mrs. Musselman and Miss Yoder left Thursday for their respective homes.

Mr. and Mrs. I. Z. Musselman and Mrs. Mary Yoder, this place, and Mrs. Thomas Johns, Baltimore, were recent dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Blaire Biesecker, Orrtanna R. 1.

FREEDOM

Boy, if you would drop to sleep
Undisturbed, then you must keep
Ear alert, in times of choice,
To that whispering inner voice
Pleading with you to be true
To the finer side of you.

If you'd live from year to year,
Standing of no man in fear,
Free to speak, and free to act,
Make with none a secret pact.
Choose, when trial comes to you,
What you know is right to do.

Gain is loss when basely won;
Wrong is never cheaply done.
Who to cunning has been swayed
Lives of every foe afraid.
Knowledge of his moments weak
Robs him of the power to speak.

Dread of gossip of his past
Holds him shackled to the last.
Hostage unto shame he stands,
Silenced tongue and fettered hands.
To attack the wrongs they see
Only honest men are free.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

TOGETHER

ONE of the most promising signs of the times is the evidence of willingness to help out the whole, which is abroad in the world today. In other words, the idea of cooperation as against destructive, unintelligent competition.

The individual cannot remain isolated and be successful, nor can he remain thus and be happy. Neither can a nation.

The spirit of mutual and happy cooperation must gain in the world if it is to remain economically sound. Jealously must be discarded as one of the most destructive forces in human life. Mutual exchange and profit come into its own. The together spirit must rule!

We must ever give as well as take—and level all returns upon the basis of the largest good to the greatest number.

In trying to beat the other fellow, we usually end in beatng ourselves. But in working with him, for him, and as a cooperative force, not only is the other fellow elevated and made stronger, but our own interests are enlarged and made more profitable.

I remember one experience upon the farm. I used to love to drive a team of horses. They seemed such noble beasts, resigned to toil, under the hand of man. I can feel their pull in front of the lines I held—even to this day. But every once in a while, one of the horses would suddenly stop. Tired, perhaps, or merely just lazy Who can say But, immediately, as that one horse would stop, the other too, would follow suit! Only in cooperation and an even handling of the pull would both perform aright.

We little realize how our lessening of effort affects the efforts of those about us. If we go ahead and do not faint by the way, an endless stream of weak hearts take courage and go ahead.

The weak follow the strong—ever it has been. But, also, those very weak ones may later become the strong—they to lead!

Together would be a good word for the world, in its present dilemma, to adopt as its own—its goal and its inspiration. And it is a very good word for each of us to own, as well.

STATE REDUCES BEAR SEASON

20-day Session And Camps Are Limited To Three, Commisison Rules.

To conserve Pennsylvania bear, the game commission has reduced both the length of the season and the camp limit for kills. The 1932 season, it was announced today, will extend from November 10 to November 30, the closing date being advanced from December 15, and camps will be limited to three instead of four animals.

The deer hunting season will remain as heretofore, from December 1 to 15, but shooting of antlerless deer will be prohibited this year. The board has closed the season on elk, of which only one was killed legally last year as compared with 20 illegal kills.

The shortening of the bear season, the commission said, was effected in view of a noticeable decrease in the kill during the last few years which was construed as warranting some protection to this class of game.

Various other changes were adopted in the season and bag limits for the purpose of conserving the state's game.

Most small game birds were given rest day periods. The season on wild turkeys, ringnecked pheasants, ruffed grouse and bobwhite quail will extend from November 1 to November 26, inclusive, with hunting permitted only on Tuesday and Wednesday of the first week; Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday of the second week; and Thursday, Friday and Saturday of the third and fourth weeks.

Wild Turkeys

There will be no open season on wild turkeys in Berks, Bradford, Carbon, Dauphin, Lackawanna, Lebanon, Lehigh, Luzerne, Monroe, Northampton, Pike, Schuylkill, Tioga, Wayne and Wyoming counties.

The season on squirrels, rabbits and hares will extend from November 1 to November 30, inclusive, with the customary six-day-a-week hunting.

There will be no open seasons on either Hungarian partridges or Reeves pheasants.

The season on fur-bearing animals including mink, opossum, skunk, and other remains unchanged and will extend from November 1 to February 28, 1933, inclusive. The season on muskrats will extend from December 1 to February 28, 1933, inclusive.

The season and bag limits also remain the same on blackbirds, October 15 to November 30; rails, September 1 to November 30; snipe, October 1 to November 20; and woodcock, October 15 to November 14.

The board did not establish open season on bag limits on migratory waterfowl because of possible conflict with federal regulations which supercede those of the state, except in such cases where the state sees fit to reduce the open season or bag limits. The commission is awaiting the declaration of the federal government in this respect and will be guided entirely by their open season and bag limits for migratory waterfowl.

BRITISH TAXATION CURBS OXFORD'S PRODIGAL SONS

Oxford, England (AP)—The gay young blades of Oxford university are less profligate than their predecessors of 30 years ago, says an official of the Oxford Chamber of Trade.

"Taxation has hit wealthy families so hard that the number of wildly extravagant young men is very small," he said.

Tradesmen find some balm in this Gilead in the fact that fewer big bills are run up on their books.

SQUEEZING RUBBER BALL AIDS FERRELL'S PITCHING

Cleveland, O. (AP)—Wes Ferrell, Cleveland Indians' pitching ace, uses a rubber ball but it is only for purposes of exercise.

Ferrell used to milk cows to strengthen his fingers. Now he squeezes the ball for long periods.

When he shags flies in the outfield at practice periods Ferrell throws with his left arm to prevent overdevelopment of his right arm and side.

Writer, Bride Plan Dirigible Trip Over Ruins

Los Angeles (AP)—Honeymoon trails for Robert B. Stacy-Judd, explorer-architect, and his bride, the former Betty Scofield, fairytale author, will lead them by land and air to the Mayan ruins in the Yucatan jungle.

Previously announced plans for Stacy-Judd's dirigible exploration flight into the jungle in search of material on which to base a purely American style of architecture had not included a Mrs. Stacy-Judd.

But cupid intervened, and instead of the explorer undertaking the expedition single-handed he will be accompanied by his bride.

The romance of Stacy-Judd and the former Miss Scofield began in a Mayan atmosphere and ended in a marriage performed a few weeks ago in the first church in the United States to adopt a Mayan motif.

Stacy-Judd was the architect for the Frst Baptist church in Ventura, California, and moulded into the church building the results of his trip into the Yucatan jungle in 1930.

He met Betty Scofield at a lecture on Mayan civilization. She, an artist as well as writer, also was interested in developing a new motif for modern art.

The Stacy-Judds plan to establish an air base at Uxmal, but the exploration will extend from Quintana Roo to Campeche. Mrs. Stacy-Judd said she would spend most of her time at Merida, Yucatan.

SPORT SLANTS

BY ALAN GOULD
ASSOCIATED PRESS SPORTS EDITOR

San Francisco and Los Angeles, usually on the opposite side of any sporting argument that happens to bob up along the big slope, have united in the common Olympic cause.

More power to them, we say, even though it is admitted some of this stimulation comes as the outgrowth of an "article sponsored by Alan Gould . . . (and which) has for its basis an interview with Avery Brundage of Chacigo," president of the American Olympic committee.

Mr. Brundage, through this exclusive "article," sounded a very pain warning as to the condition of the Olympic financial resources, emphasizing that the American Olympic committee will not spend money it doesn't collecet, "even if it means we cannot raise enough money to send more than half a dozen athletes to Los Angeles.

To this pessimism, the Olympian, house organ of the powerful Olympic club of San Francisco, objects and accuses Mr. Brundage of "hollerin' before you're hit." It nglects to recognize, however, that a number of blows already have been struck, financially speaking, and that the Chicago business man simply rose up, quite properly, to face the facts before it is too late.

He seems to have accomplished his purpose, for, having taken this fling, the Olympian rallies to the cause.

Rallying Cry

'Californians will not, must not, permit this failure," says the Olympian's editorial. "In several great emergencies she has brought gold into almost empty coffers at the eleventh hour. When has there ever been a drive for the Community Chest, when pessimism has not foretold failure, only to find it filled sometimes during the very last days of a determined drive?

Distance and the great cost of transportation may in some degree lessen the volume of attendance and reduce the number of contestants, but neither deterring power can make the tenth Olympiad at Los Angeles the comically puny show of half a dozen athletes as expresesed in the back-down speech of President Brundage.

"The far west will not permit the intrusion of such a calamity. We of the Pacific states will not permit it, San Francisco will not permit it, and who believes that our wonderful sister city of Los Angeles will other than laugh at the merest suggestion that she will permit it either?

"Los Angeles, as the passing generation has already established, has made wilder predictions, thrown more bluffs, fulfilled more extravagant prophecies than any other city of the United States, and she has not yet recorded a single failure.

"Such ceaseless enterprise as this, is going to redouble itself in the face even of the destroying predictions touched upon. . . . So go to it, Los Angeles! You never failed yet and such a tragedy is not in the cards now."

'Holler' Again

Perhaps a little more "hollerin'" by the aforesaid Mr. Brundage of Chicago will help stimulate the current drives for Olympic funds in Boston, New York, Philadelphia, as well as his home town.

Presumably even the Olympian would "permit" that.

4-year-old Girl Cries Way Into Film Prominence

Hollywood (AP)—Four-year-old Coda Sue Collins can't exactly be called a "cry-baby," but she can shed tears at will.

And largely because it's no trick for her to cry, Cora Sue has made an auspicious start on a film career that promises to bring her prominent parts in movies made in the next few years.

Cora Sue is a naive little miss with brown eyes and curls. She was one of the principals in "The Unexpected Father," and now because of her ability to cry when she wants to she has a part in "The Strange Case of Clara Deane."

But the road to a movie career hasn't been smooth for Cora Sue and her mother, Mrs. Clyde Collins. The were residents of Clarksburg, West Virginia, until a few months ago.

The neighbors all said Cora Sue should be in the movies. The Collins family had had financial reverses, however, and getting to Hollywood was a problem. But Mrs. Collins was undaunted, and she managed to get enough money together for railroad fare. With a little left over. The mother, Cora Sue and Cora's 10-year-old sister, Madge, set out for Hollywood.

But more trouble awaited. The girls became ill and were in bed for a month. Mrs. Collins sold hosiery and her husband sent what money he could spare to tide them over.

Then came good luck. A woman who admired Cora Sue on the street the first day after she recovered from her illness proved to be a friend of an agent who arranged for the test which got Cora Sue her first job.

Mrs. Collins has faith in Cora's ability and thinks some day she will be a "great big star." As she says:

"I may be wrong, but I think Cora Sue is different."

ODDS AGAINST BEST GOLFERS

Sarazen And Von Elm Prime Choices In National Golf Tournament.

By Allan Gould

The odds should be at least 8 to 1 against any of the topflight contenders in the national open golf championship, to be played out on Long Island, including such stalwarts as Sarazen, Armour, Farrell, Burke, Von Elm and Mac Smith.

Offhand we would say the winner should be found late in June among these half dozen stars, with Sarazen and Von Elm the prime choices.

Sarazen is a first class wager to win because he was the pro for years at Fresh Meadow, scene of the tournament, and Fresh Meadow happens to pay off on the kind of a long, smashing game that Gene possesses. Von Elm and Armour also will find this tough layout well suited to their slashing styles. Von Elm has been close to winning the open several times, lost only after a 72 hole playoff with Bill Burke last year, and may fight his way to the top this time.

The chance of the golfers in "the field," the 116 who qualified sectionally, can be written off at long odds. We should say the prospects of most were just about 116 to 1 against, although we would not care to risk anything like that against the prospects of so good a golfer as Fred Morrison, winner of the rich Agua Caliente open last wnter and a Los Angeles district qualifier.

Yanks 'Set' On Mound

If the acquisition of the best right-hander on the Red Sox staff, Danny MacFayden doesn't keep the Yankees o ntop of the American league they can't blame the depression or any lack of co-operation by the Boston club.

In exchange for MacFayden the Yankees no doubt parted with at least $25,000 in cash, besides two partially damaged pieces of pitching ivory. They now possess, in MacFayden, Ruffing, Pipgras, Pennock, Allen and Lefty Gomez the best pitching staff the club has had in ten years.

Pennock still crafty and capable, is the only survivor of the first Yankee championship staff that included Bob Shawkey, Carl Mays, Sam Jones and Waite Hoyt.

Jones is now with the White Sox, Hoyt has just been released by Brooklyn, Shawkey is through and Mays is now hurling for the Longview club of the Timber league, a small semi-pro circuit in western Washington.

'With Love'—The Cards . .

Without anything on their roster to show for it in return, the Cardinals now have passed along to the Cincinnati Reds a collection of talent including Chick Hafey, Taylor Douhit and Wally Roettger, at one time the complete Cardinal outfield; Andy High and Harvey Hendrick, utility infielders; Bennie Frey, pitcher.

These warm hearted, generous champions also have passed along Burleigh Grimes to the Cubs, shuttled Hack Wilson to Brooklyn, Eddie Delker and Charles Flint Rhem to the Phillies.

Even so, the Red Birds cannot be said to have flown completely out of the pennant picture and their books, no doubt, show a satisfactory financial story as a consequence of all the export trade.

The Grimes-Wilson deal alone meant an aggregate saving and profit of around $75,000 and Cincinnati, presumably, will be paying instalments on its shipments for the rest of 1932, if not longer.

SISLER STILL GOING STRONG

Shreveport, La. (AP)—Although not so as in former seasons, George Sisler, onetime major league idol, has been playing good ball this season for Shreveport of the Texas league. He is manager of the club.

INDIANA ATHLETES STAR WITH NO TRAINING

Bloomington, Ind. (AP) — The theory that preparatory school experience aids college athetes has been knocked sky high again at Indiana university.

Henry Brocksmith, who recently set new Western conference marks for the mile and two-mile runs, never engaged in a track meet before coming to college.

Neither did Bryce Beecher, pole vaulter and high jumper, expected to star in Big Ten outdoor games.

H.B. BENDER & SON
FUNERAL DIRECTORS
GETTYSBURG, PA

San Francisco and Los Angeles, usually on the opposite side of any sporting argument that happens to bob up along the big slope, have united in the common Olympic cause.

More power to them, we say, even though it is admitted some of this stimulation comes as the outgrowth of an "article sponsored by Alan Gould . . . (and which) has for its basis an interview with Avery Brundage of Chacigo," president of the American Olympic committee.

Mr. Brundage, through this exclusive "article," sounded a very pain warning as to the condition of the Olympic financial resources, emphasizing that the American Olympic committee will not spend money it doesn't collecet, "even if it means we cannot raise enough money to send more than half a dozen athletes to Los Angeles.

To this pessimism, the Olympian, house organ of the powerful Olympic club of San Francisco, objects and accuses Mr. Brundage of "hollerin' before you're hit." It nglects to recognize, however, that a number of blows already have been struck, financially speaking, and that the Chicago business man simply rose up, quite properly, to face the facts before it is too late.

He seems to have accomplished his purpose, for, having taken this fling, the Olympian rallies to the cause.

Rallying Cry

'Californians will not, must not, permit this failure," says the Olympian's editorial. "In several great emergencies she has brought gold into almost empty coffers at the eleventh hour. When has there ever been a drive for the Community Chest, when persimism has not foretold failure, only to find it filled sometimes during the very last days of a determined drive?

Distance and the great cost of transportation may in some degree lessen the volume of attendance and reduce the number of contestants, but neither deterring power can make the tenth Olympiad at Los Angeles the comically puny show of half a dozen athletes as expresesed in the back-down speech of President Brundage.

"The far west will not permit the intrusion of such a calamity. We of the Pacific states will not permit it, San Francisco will not permit it, and who believes that our wonderful sister city of Los Angeles will other than laugh at the merest suggestion that she will permit it either?

"Los Angeles, as the passing generation has already established, has made wilder predictions, thrown more bluffs, fulfilled more extravagant prophecies than any other city of the United States, and she has not yet recorded a single failure.

"Such ceaseless enterprise as this is going to redouble itself in the face even of the destroying predictions touched upon. . . . So go to it Los Angeles! You never failed yet and such a tragedy is not in the cards now."

'Holler' Again

Perhaps a little more "hollerin'" by the aforesaid Mr. Brundage of Chicago will help stimulate the current drives for Olympic funds in Boston, New York, Philadelphia, as well as his home town.

Presumably even the Olympian would "permit" that.

4-year-old Girl Cries Way Into Film Prominence

Hollywood (AP)—Four-year-old Coda Sue Collins can't exactly be called a "cry-baby," but she can shed tears at will.

And largely because it's no trick for her to cry, Cora Sue has made an auspicious start on a film career that promises to bring her prominent parts in movies made in the next few years.

Cora Sue is a naive little miss with brown eyes and curls. She was one of the principals in "The Unexpected Father," and now because of her ability to cry when she wants to she has a part in "The Strange Case of Clara Deane."

But the road to a movie career hasn't been smooth for Cora Sue and her mother, Mrs. Clyde Collins. The were residents of Clarksburg, West Virginia, until a few months ago.

The neighbors all said Cora Sue should be in the movies. The Collins family had had financial reverses, however, and getting to Hollywood was a problem. But Mrs. Collins was undaunted, and she managed to get enough money together for railroad fare. With a little left over. The mother, Cora Sue and Cora's 10-year-old sister, Madge, set out for Hollywood.

But more trouble awaited. The girls became ill and were in bed for a month. Mrs. Collins sold hosiery and her husband sent what money he could spare to tide them over.

Then came good luck. A woman who admired Cora Sue on the street the first day after she recovered from her illness proved to be a friend of an agent who arranged for the test which got Cora Sue her first job.

Mrs. Collins has faith in Cora's ability and thinks some day she will be a "great big star." As she says: "I may be wrong, but I think Cora Sue is different."

Sixty-five ping-pongers participated in a city championship tournament in Kansas City.

ODDS AGAINST BEST GOLFERS

Sarazen And Von Elm Prime Choices In National Golf Tournament.

By Allan Gould

The odds should be at least 8 to 1 against any of the topflight contenders in the national open golf championship, to be played out on Long Island, including such stalwarts as Sarazen, Armour, Farrell, Burke, Von Elm and Mac Smith.

Offhand we would say the winner should be found late in June among these half dozen stars, with Sarazen and Von Elm the prime choices.

Sarazen is a first class wager to win because he was the pro for years at Fresh Meadow, scene of the tournament, and Fresh Meadow happens to pay off on the kind of a long, smashing game that Gene possesses. Von Elm and Armour also will find this tough layout well suited to their slashing styles. Von Elm has been close to winning the open several times, lost only after a 72 hole playoff with Bill Burke last year, and may fight his way to the top this time.

The chance of the golfers in "the field," the 116 who qualified sectionally, can be written off at long odds. We should say the prospects of most were just about 116 to 1 against, although we would not care to risk anything like that against the prospects of so good a golfer as Fred Morrison, winner of the rich Agua Caliente open last wnter and a Los Angeles district qualifier.

Yanks 'Set' On Mound

If the acquisition of the best right-hander on the Red Sox staff, Danny MacFayden doesn't keep the Yankees o ntop of the American league they can't blame the depression or any lack of co-operation by the Boston club.

In exchange for MacFayden the Yankees no doubt parted with at least $25,000 in cash, besides two partially damaged pieces of pitching ivory. They now possess, in MacFayden, Ruffing, Pipgras, Pennock, Allen and Lefty Gomez the best pitching staff the club has had in ten years.

Pennock still crafty and capable, is the only survivor of the first Yankee championship staff that included Bob Shawkey, Carl Mays, Sam Jones and Waite Hoyt.

Jones is now with the White Sox, Hoyt has just been released by Brooklyn, Shawkey is through and Mays is now hurling for the Longview club of the Timber league, a small semi-pro circuit in western Washington.

'With Love'—The Cards . .

Without anything on their roster to show for it in return, the Cardinals now have passed along to the Cincinnati Reds a collection of talent including Chick Hafey, Taylor Douhit and Wally Roettger, at one time the complete Cardinal outfield; Andy High and Harvey Hendrick, utility infielders; Bennie Frey, pitcher.

Those warm hearted, generous champions also have passed along Burleigh Grimes to the Cubs, shuttled Hack Wilson to Brooklyn, Eddie Delker and Charles Flint Rhem to the Phillies.

Even so, the Red Birds cannot be said to have flown completely out of the pennant picture and their books, no doubt, show a satisfactory financial story as a consequence of all the export trade.

The Grimes-Wilson deal alone meant an aggregate saving and profit of around $75,000 and Cincinnati, presumably, will be paying instalments on its shipments for the rest of 1932, if not longer.

SISLER STILL GOING STRONG

Shreveport, La. (AP)—Although not so as in former seasons, George Sisler, onetime major league idol, has been playing good ball this season for Shreveport of the Texas league. He is manager of the club.

Another Revolutionary Hero Gone: It becomes our painful duty to announce the death of General Joseph Heister, late governor of this commonwealth. He expired on Sunday afternoon after a lingering illness, occasioned by a fall from a horse nearly a year since.

The following persons were on Friday last elected officers of the Gettysburg and Black's Tavern turnpike company:

Highly Important From England: Abandonment of the Reform bill, resignation of the Grey ministry, appointment of the Wellington ministry, the ship Marmora, at New York, brings a Liverpool paper of the 14th of May.

The reform bill was defeated in the house of lords on the 12th by a majority of forty. On the 13th news was received at Liverpool. Placards were posted around the streets with the heading—"Down with the House of Lords" It is said that the king refused to sign the papers for the new peers whom Earl Grey wished to create to carry the bill. The ministers thereupon resigned, and a new ministry was to be created, at the head of which the Duke of Wellington would again be placed.

The king came to London on the 12th, on which day the Duke of Wellington was appointed first lord of the treasury, and kissed his majesty's hand on entering upon the duties of premier.

Important Intelligence from France: The ship Henri IV, Captain Rockett, arrived from Havre and brought the editors of the New York American Advocate Paris files to the 8th and Havre papers to the 10th ult.

The endeavorers of the Carlist faction have met with a signal overthrow by the arrest of the Duchess De Berri. Driven by the winds and the waves upon the coast of a country, the tranquillity of which she was endeavoring to disturb, and seized in the very act of treason, her life would have been the forfeit, had the laws, created under the auspices of the fallen dynasty, been carried into effect for the punishment of a traitress. In the reigns of Louis XVIII and Charles X, had a member of the Bonaparte family engaged in an attempt to subvert the existing order, and been thrown upon the French soil by the anger of the elements a short trial and a short shrift would have been accorded to the unfortunate. We rejoice in the clemency of the government of France.

We have heard from various sources for some time past that there was a lamentable desecration of the Sabbath by visitors to the beautiful spot "Evergreen Cemetery." Its attractions are great and we wonder not that it should be a place of general resort, but we learn that the conduct of many who visit it on the Sabbath is of the most reprehensible character and calls earnestly for vigorous action on the part of those who have the direction of affairs there.

Read The Bible With Us Daily

Open to me the gates of righteousness: I will go into them, and I will praise the Lord:

This gate of the Lord, into which the righteous shall enter.

I will praise thee: for thou hast heard me, and art become my salvation.

The stone which the builders refused is become the head stone of the corner.

This is the Lord's doing; it is marvellous in our eyes.

This is the day which the Lord hath made; we will rejoice and be glad in it.

Save now, I beseech thee, O Lord:, I beseech thee, send now prosperity.

Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord: we have blessed you out of the house of the Lord.

God is the Lord, which hath shewed us light: bind the sacrifice with cords, even unto the horns of the altar.

Thou are my God, and I will praise thee: thou art my God, I will exalt thee.

O give thanks unto the Lord; for he is good: for his mercy endureth for ever.

A SUMMER PARTY

(Afternoon or evening)

Frozen Fruit Salad Butterhorns
Strawberry Sherbet
Angel Food Cake
Coffee Salted Nuts

Frozen Fruit Salad for 8

1 cup mayonnaise, 1 cup whipped cream, 1½ cups diced canned pineapple, 1 cup diced peaches, 1 cup diced pears, ½ cup red cherries.

Mix mayonnaise and cream. Add rest of ingredients. Pour into tray in mechanical refrigerator and in 4 hours salad will be frozen. Serve on lettuce and top with more mayonnaise.

Butterhorns
(32 tasty rolls)

1 cake compressed yeast, 2 tablespoons lukewarm water, 1 cup milk (lukewarm), ½ cup fat, ½ cup sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, 2 eggs, 4½ cups flour.

Crumble yeast and add water. Let stand 5 minutes. Add milk, fat (melted), sugar, salt, eggs and ½ the flour. Beat 2 minutes. Add rest of flour, mixing thoroughly.

Place in greased bowl. Cover with cloth and let rise in moderately warm place until dough has doubled in bulk. It will require about 4 hours for dough to rise. Divide dough in two parts and roll out each part until circles 8 inches in diameter have been formed.

Use sharp knife and cut circles into halves. Then cut each half into 8 pieces, making 16 triangular shaped pieces of dough from each circle. The dough is rather soft so that even pieces can not be cut, but by pulling with fingers the dough can be made as desired.

Beginning at wide side of the triangular shaped pieces roll up each piece. Place butterhorns side by side on a greased pan and let rise until doubled in bulk. It will require about 4 hours to rise. Cover butterhorns with cloth to prevent crust from forming on tops. Bake 20 minutes in moderate oven. A good fat mixture is made by using half butter and half lard.

BONUS SEEKERS LEAVING CAPITAL

Washington, June 20 (AP)—Discouraged war veterans who came to Washington in hope of receiving cash for their war service certificates straggled homeward Saturday as their leaders vainly tried to held their ranks intact.

The senate's overwhelming defeat of thebonus payment measure Friday night took its toll of the ranks and soon after daylight the roads leading away from Washington were dotted with groups of weary, rain-soaked veterans leaving the nation's capital behind them.

Police said the veterans were leaving in large groups but leaders in the veterans' camp said that only about 150 had gone home to recruit more men for their army.

Bad weather which has continued for a week discouraged many who left individually for their home The veterans' headquarters claimed 23,000 men were in the city but this figure was more than double the number estimated Saturday by police

DeValera Seeks United Irish Republic; Does Not Stray From Stand.

London, June 20 (AP)—The commons was told Friday that the ultimate aim of President de Valera was a united Irish republic recognizing the British crown "in certain circumstances."

J. H. Thomas, secretary for dominions, said the president of the Free State made this assertion to him in Dublin last week during negotiations to settle differences.

Mr. Thomas said Mr. de Valera envisioned an Irish republic, including Ulster, which would be called, understood and accepted as a republic.

Plan Held Possible

Mr. de Valera was pictured as recognizing circumstances in which the British commonwealth would act as a unit for external purposes. Then "His Majesty the King would be recognized as the head" of the British commonwealth.

Mr. Thomas told the commons he had informed Mr. de Valera that it would do no good to talk about such a plan, because neither this not any other British government would agree to such a proposal.

The dominion secretary's remark came when he read a dispatch from the head of the Irish Free State during a debate on the Irish question.

The purport of this dispatch, Mr. Thomas said, was that De Valera had not deviated one iota from his original position on the abolition of the Irish oath of allegiance and the land annuity payments.

FREEDOM

Boy, if you would drop to sleep
Undisturbed, then you must keep
Ear alert, in times of choice,
To that whispering inner voice
Pleading with you to be true
To the finer side of you.

If you'd live from year to year,
Standing of no man in fear,
Free to speak, and free to act,
Make with none a secret pact.
Choose, when trial comes to you,
What you know is right to do.

Gain is loss when basely won;
Wrong is never cheaply done.
Who to cunning has been swayed
Lives of every foe afraid.
Knowledge of his moments weak
Robs him of the power to speak.

Dread of gossip of his past
Holds him shackled to the last.
Hostage unto shame he stands,
Silenced tongue and fettered hands.
To attack the wrongs they see
Only honest men are free.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

TOGETHER

ONE of the most promising signs of the times is the evidence of willingness to help out the whole, which is abroad in the world today. In other words, the idea of cooperation as against destructive, unintelligent competition

The individual cannot remain isolated and be successful, nor can he remain thus and be happy. Neither can a nation.

The spirit of mutual and happy cooperation must gain in the world if it is to remain economically sound Jealously must be discarded as one of the most destructive forces in human life. Mutual exchange and profit come into its own The together spirit must rule!

We must ever give as well as take—and level all returns upon the basis of the largest good to the greatest number

In trying to beat the other fellow, we usually end in beating ourselves. But in working with him, for him, and as a cooperative force, not only is the other fellow elevated and made stronger, but our own interests are enlarged and made more profitable.

I remember one experience upon the farm I used to love to drive a team of horses They seemed such noble beasts, resigned to toil, under the hand of man I can feel them pull in front of the lines I held—even to this day But every once in a while, one of the horses would suddenly stop Tired perhaps, or merely just lazy Who can say But, immediately, as that one horse would stop, the other too, would follow suit! Only in cooperation and an even handling of the pull would both perform aright

We little realize how our lessening of effort affects the efforts of those about us If we go ahead and do not faint by the way, an endless stream of weak hearts take courage and go ahead.

The weak follow the strong ever it has been. But, also, those very weak ones may later become the strong—they to lead!

Together would be a good word for the world, in its present dilemma, to adopt as its own -its goal and its inspiration. And it is a very good word for each of us to own, as well.

STATE REDUCES BEAR SEASON

20-day Session And Camps Are Limited To Three, Commisison Rules.

To conserve Pennsylvania bear, the game commission has reduced both the length of the season and the camp limit for kills. The 1932 season, it was announced today, will extend from November 10 to November 30, the closing date being advanced from December 15, and camps will be limited to three instead of four animals.

The deer hunting season will remain as heretofore, from December 1 to 15, but shooting of antlerless deer will be prohibited this year. The board has closed the season on elk, of which only one was killed legally last year as compared with 20 illegal kills.

The shortening of the bear season, the commission said, was effected in view of a noticeable decrease in the kill during the last few years which was construed as warranting some protection to this class of game.

Various other changes were adopted in the season and bag limits for the purpose of conserving the state's game.

Most small game birds were given rest day periods. The season on wild turkeys, ringnecked pheasants, ruffed grouse and bobwhite quail will extend from November 1 to November 26, inclusive, with hunting permitted only on Tuesday and Wednesday of the first week; Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday of the second week; and Thursday, Friday and Saturday of the third and fourth weeks.

Wild Turkeys

There will be no open season on wild turkeys in Berks, Bradford, Carbon, Dauphin, Lackawanna, Lebanon, Lehigh, Luzerne, Monroe, Northampton, Pike, Schuylkill, Tioga, Wayne and Wyoming counties.

The season on squirrels, rabbits and hares will extend from November 1 to November 30, inclusive, with the customary six-day-a-week hunting.

There will be no open seasons on either Hungarian partridges or Reeves pheasants.

The season on fur-bearing animals including mink, opossum, skunk, and other remains unchanged and will extend from November 1 to February 28, 1933, inclusive. The season on muskrats will extend from December 1 to February 28, 1933, inclusive.

The season and bag limits also remain the same on blackbirds, October 15 to November 30; rails, September 1 to November 30; snipe, October 1 to November 20; and woodcock, October 15 to November 14.

The board did not establish open season on bag limits on migratory waterfowl because of possible conflict with federal regulations which supercede those of the state, except in such cases where the state sees fit to reduce the open season or bag limits. The commission is awaiting the declaration of the federal government in this respect and will be guided entirely by their open season and bag limits for migratory waterfowl.

BRITISH TAXATION CURBS OXFORD'S PRODIGAL SONS

Oxford, England (AP)—The gay young blades of Oxford university are less profligate than their predecessors of 30 years ago, says an official of the Oxford Chamber of Trade.

Writer, Bride Plan Dirigible Trip Over Ruins

Los Angeles (AP)—Honeymoon trails for Robert B. Stacy-Judd, explorer-architect, and his bride, the former Betty Scofield, fairytale author, will lead them by land and air to the Mayan ruins in the Yucatan jungle.

Previously announced plans for Stacy-Judd's dirigible exploration flight into the jungle in search of material on which to base a purely American style of architecture had not included a Mrs. Stacy-Judd.

But cupid intervened, and instead of the explorer undertaking the expedition single-handed he will be accompanied by his bride.

The romance of Stacy-Judd and the former Miss Scofield began in a Mayan atmosphere and ended in a marriage performed a few weeks ago in the first church in the United States to adopt a Mayan motif.

Stacy-Judd was the architect for the First Baptist church in Ventura, California, and moulded into the church building the results of his trip into the Yucatan jungle in 1930.

He met Betty Scofield at a lecture on Mayan civilization. She, an artist as well as writer, also was interested in developing a new motif for modern art.

The Stacy-Judds plan to establish an air base at Uxmal, but the exploration will extend from Quintana Roo to Campeche. Mrs. Stacy-Judd said she would spend most of her time at Merida, Yucatan.

Young Californian Heavyweight Steals Spotlight After Victory

By Brian Bell

Los Angeles (AP)—Lee Ramage, young California heavyweight, may be heard from in a serious way one of these days.

Boxing fans have begun to inquire about the 21-year-old San Diego youngster following his decision over Steve Hamas, Penn State product who had been victorious in all previous bouts as a professional.

Investigation reveals that Lee received his first boxing instruction in high school after stopping so many punches with his nose that a kind-hearted coach took pity on him.

The coach, John, Perry, once a prominent amateur boxer, told the story after Ramage defeated Ace Hudkins, the Nebraska Wildcat, for the California heavyweight championship.

Had Tough Time

Even when a sophomore at San Diego high school four years ago Ramage possessed a splendid physique. Lee, is seems, had no trouble getting along with members of his own class, but a group of seniors found great pleasure in roughing him up. His protests always brought him a black eye or bruised nose.

"I persuaded him to come over to the gym and put the gloves on with me," said Perry, "after witnessing his affrays with the hazers. I felt sorry for him."

Within a few months Ramage heavyweight champion of the school. The county boxing carnival followed.

Sought No Revenge

Opposed to Ramage in the heavyweight division was a youngster of his own size and weight, Sam Gallagher, who had been one of his early tormentors. When the Ramage-Gallagher bout was called Coach Perry found Lee in the dressingroom in his street clothes.

"Coach, I'm a peace-loving soul," he explained. "I don't like to fight and I never will. I might hurt Sam badly or he might hurt me."

"You can't quit now," Perry told him. "Are you afraid of Gallagher?"

"No, I am not afraid."

"Then go in and prove it." Ramage did just that by knocking his opponent out in two rounds.

Courage Now Unquestioned

Later Ramage wet to San Francisco for the Pacific Coast amateur championship bouts and was beaten by a husky lad named Tucker, who fought for the Olympic club.

Boxing was dropped at San Diego high school soon after and upon his graduation in 1929 Ramage turned professional. He had no lack of nerve by this time.

In one of his early professional bouts his jaw was broken by Jimmy Hanna. The damaging blow landed in the second round, but the San Diego boy was up after a count of nine and went on to finish the eighth round before the referee or his seconds discovered the injury and Hanna was declared the winner by a technical knockout.

Ramage weighs 174 pounds. He is an accomplished boxer and is being called "another Gene Tunney" by his more enthusiastic admirers. This is going too far for he cannot yet hit as Tunney did, although he may pick up a punch as he goes along.

FRENCH PONDER HERRIOT COURSE TOWARD REICH

French Conservatives Uneasy About German Elections, July 31.

By Joseph E. Sharkey

Paris (AP)—Frenchmen are wondering whether the swing to the left as manifested in Edouard Herriot's new cabinet will result in more conciliation in German relations and whether the victorious radical socialists will cooperate with Hitlerism.

French conservatives, shunted into a corner, are a bit nervous about the new German elections of July 31. They see danger in Hitlerism and, in the long run, apprehend war.

But some French newspapers have displayed articles which suggest that France should try to look at Hitlerism as a bulwark against communism which, although stoutly nationalistic, is not necessarily a pro-war movement.

Premier Seeks Peace

Herriot is a pronounced peace advocate and a stout supporter of the League of Nations. He believes in developing international cooperation and in talking softly to Germany, but apparently stands behind the French thesis of disarmament which calls for the creation of an international military, naval and air force.

Herriot acknowledges that he must keep ever in mind the rather general French apprehension that France may again be invaded by Germany.

One of the most striking posters of the campaign which put him in power was a long, wide streamer suspended from a high building on the Boulevard des Italiens blazoning that France has been four times invaded and that armament reduction must be contingent upon the creation of systems guaranteeing her inviolability.

Though some Frenchmen think German Hitlerism should be negotiated with, the conservative forces of the nation regard the spread of Hitlerism as a potential danger to France. They keep saying it took almost the whole world to beat Germany in 1918, and that at present France has no powerful country upon whom she can count if a new aggressive war is launched against her.

Poincare in Warning

Ex-Premier Raymond Poincare, who sent a French army of occupation into the Ruhr, has come out in a statement which reflects these French apprehensions.

Commenting on the memoirs of Gustav Stresemann, late German foreign minister, Poincare insists they prove that even this heralded man of peace never made the slightest concession to France. Poincare said:

'He didn't talk like Hitler, but he demonstrated that even the most moderate Germans really think like other Germans, and that we should have no illusions about the feelings of our neighbors. We must keep our eyes open."

Germans Suggest Scrap Iron Cure For Shipping Ills

Hamburg, Germany (AP) — The world-wide economic crisis has a stranglehold on Germany's merchant marine.

In an effort to cure the paralysis of the merchant fleet and to provide some relief of unemployment, the government proposes to convert thousands of tons of seaworthy shipping into scrap iron.

Insolvency among the ranks of smaller shipping companies increases every day and vessels totaling more than 600,000 tons lie idle in this harbor alone.

Most of the 90 German tramp steamer companies are suffering greatly from the business stagnation. High tariff barriers of various countries settled the fate of the German freight fleet, representing almost 700,000 tons out of a total capacity of 4,200,000 tons.

Shipowners petitioned the government to extend the long-term credit. The authorities declined on the ground that credits do not insure recovery.

It is the ministry of transportation's plan to prevent the sale of a part of this laid-up tonnage which, they fear, would otherwise, under some foreign flag, appear as competitors of what remains of the German merchant marine.

So the ministry advocates the scrapping of at least 120,000 tons of shipping. A "scrapping premium" of $5 to $7 a ton is to be paid to the owners.

Trade For Hafey Gives Reds Second Slugging Outfielder

Cincinnati (AP) — No matter what else happens the Cincinnati Reds are determined not to fool around any more with feeble hitting.

The club last season saw many a well-pitched ball game go up in smoke because there was nobody around to drive in a measly run or two.

Indeed, in the outfield where the heavy sluggers are supposed to roam, there was only one man who hit over .300. That was Wally Roettger, obtained from the St. Louis Cardinals, who played in only 44 games.

But this year things will be different. Manager Dan Howley and Sidney Weil, club president, decided after the 1931 season that no trade could make the Reds finish lower, which was eighth.

Their first big break came when Babe Herman, Brooklyn slugger, couldn't agree on salary with the Dodgers. Herman wound up in a Red uniform, though it was necessary to ship Tony Cuccionello and Joe Stripp, regular infielders, and Clyde Sukeforth, catcher to Flatbush to complete the deal.

Another big break resulted from the refusal of Chick Hafey, last year batting champion of the National league, to meet the terms offered by the St. Louis Cardinals. The Reds gladly handed over Benny Frey, right-handed hurler, Harvey Hendrick, first baseman, and a bundle of cash for Hafey's contract.

Now in the place of such men as Edd Roush, who batted .271 in 1931, Estel Crabtree, whose average was .268 and Cliff Heathcote, a .257 hitter, the Reds will show two of the heaviest hitters in the leage.

The Reds wound up last year in sixth place for club batting, scoring a total of 592 runs. This total was more than 200 back of the Chicago Cubs, leaders in runs scored.

After trading for Hafey, Howley indignantly denied that the Reds intended to pass the big hitter along to some other team.

Famous Trophies Sent To London's Gold Melting Pots

London (AP)—Thirty years ago the people of Kimberley, South Africa, presented to the late Field Marshal the Earl of Wpres a magnificent sword, its hilt of gold encrusted with diamonds and rubies.

The earl treasured it as a memento of his Boer war campaign. But with his death hard times and increased prices for gold resulting from Britain's lapse from the gold standard have led to sale of the sword to a London bullion broker.

The broker thinks the trophy to beautiful to melt up and is considering its return to Kimberley.

One of the Ascot gold cups won at the famous track since beginning of the reign of George V, has also been sold to a broker. There is much speculation as to which of the 22 Ascot meetings since 1910 it belonged.

The Gold Cup, a magnificent trophy of the turf, brought $1,750 from the broker. He immediately scratched off its name and date so that unfavorable publicity might not attach to its previous owner.

He first ascertained, however, that it was not the 1907 cup, stolen shortly after it was won.

TEN YEAR CHESS MATCH RESULTS ONLY IN DRAW

Slaithwaite, England (AP).—Commenced more than ten years ago, a game of chess between H. Kaye and John Garside of this Yorkshire village has ended in a draw.

As fellow members of a local chess club they arranged to play by correspondence when Kaye moved to Australia. The first move was made in November, 1921, and the game proceeded at the rate of four moves a year. Garside, announcing the result, said:

"We never lost interest, but perhaps we are not sorry it has ended."

Alfonso Introduces Game To Englishmen

London (AP)—Add to light occupations the game "alfonso," sponsored by no less a person than the former king of Spain himself!

Alfonso showed "alfonso" to the sixteenth Lancers, of which he is colonel-in-chief, recently, and since then it has been the rage in parlor-military circles.

Officers, other than those selected as victims, stand in two lines facing each other, and with their hands joined, forming a kind of bridge.

Each victim then takes a run and throws himself onto the arms of the first paid, who fling him to the next pair, and so on to the last pair who toss him onto a sofa which has been placed to break his fall but which he rarely lands upon.

The first pair, throwing their man high, shout "Al!" The second pair "Fon!" and the third "So!"

LOMSKI MAKES DEBUT AGAINST OREGON GRAPPLER

Aberdeen, Wash. (AP) — Leo Lomski, known as the "Aberdeen Assassin" a few years ago when he was one of the leading contenders for the light-heavyweight boxing championship, has turned wrestler.

After a series of defeats in the boxing ring recently against boys who would have been considered setups during his prime, Lomski joined the grapplers and won his first match from Frank Gaines, 170-pounder of Portland, Oregon.

PAINS VANISHED QUICKLY AFTER ADAMS CO. MATRON TAKES NATEX

Trouble In Stomach Had Caused Much Suffering, Appetite Gone, And Entire System Rundown In General. Feels Wonderful Now.

"Anyone who has suffered as much as I did can easily understand why I am so enthusiastic about Natex for ending my ailments," declared Mrs. Hays Groft, a popular young employee of the Newark Shoe Co., who lives at Centennial.

"Before I started taking Natex I had suffered dreadfully with pains in my stomach, especially right after eating. The pains were so severe that I was almost afraid to eat a thing. It seemed like everything I ate caused me indigestion and dyspepsia and my heart would pound so hard that I could bearly breathe.

"Besides all this, I suffered with splitting headaches which were probably due to faulty elimination as my bowels had been constipated for a long time. I often had pains in my back and my health in general was so badly rundown that I was usually tired and listless and had hardly enough energy to do a thing.

"I had often read in the paper how Natex had helped first this person and then another and so on day after day, and I wondered if it would help me. I made up my mind to give it a trial. You can imagine my amazement when my condition started to respond to treatment almost immediately, and now after taking three bottles of Natex, I am in excellent health again. I eat three nice meals every day with never a thought of trouble afterwards and the pains in my back have disappeared. I no longer suffer with those dreadful headaches as my bowels are now normal and Natex cleansed my system thoroughly. I awaken every morning full of pep and vitality and ready for my duties of the day. I feel so much better in every way that I would be selfish not to tell others about the wonderful benefits of Natex."

Natex is being sold and recommended by all leading druggists everywhere and especially by Bender's Cut Rate Store (formerly Murphy's), 16 Baltimore St. Accept no substitute, there is no other medicine like Natex. Natex is the only triple-strength prescription perfected by a college professor from nature's roots and herbs.
